Rebels Open Drive on Madrid; Italy Accepts Neutrality Pact; Britain Warns 2 Belligerents

Armies 200,000 Strong Converge on Capital From Mountains.

Uribarri's 'Toughs' Advance to Defense

Loyalists Take Huesca; Russians Give Leftist Cause $13,000,000.

Spanish Revolt.

The long-awaited rebel drive on Madrid was launched at dawn yesterday by insurgent armies from the mountains outside the capital. Simultaneously, rebel forces struck again at the besieged city of San Sebastian. A loyalist army marched out of Madrid in an effort to repel Fascist forces approaching from the south.

Italy accepted last night the French proposal for neutrality in the Spanish strife, conditioning its acceptance on co-operation by other major powers. England warned the Spanish belligerents its ships would return fire in case of any attack in Spanish waters.

French diplomats saw increasing danger of world conflict. Germany again warned the Spanish loyalist government on interference with shipping. Reports of Russian financial aid to the loyalists stirred ill feeling in Berlin.

Rebels Open Drive.

By the Associated Press.

Pamplona, Spain (By Courier to French Frontier), Aug. 21.—The "big push" on Madrid was launched by the rebel northern army at dawn today.

Military headquarters at Pamplona said three rebel columns atop the Guadarrama Mountains northwest of the loyalist capital had opened their long-awaited drive.

[An army of veteran fighters marched out of Madrid yesterday in a move to halt rebel Moors and Legionnaires advancing on the city from the south.—Editor's Note.]

The rebel forces in the northwest included Moorish troops brought from the southern armies of Gen. Francisco Franco, regulars, Fascists and Carlists.

A terrific artillery barrage by land batteries and airplanes began the advance.

Rebel officers said the push would be halted after several miles to consolidate positions, and then would be resumed in a fierce attempt "to take the capital within a short time."

Simultaneously, rebel forces on the San Sebastian front launched a heavy drive at Hernani and Lasarte, a short distance from the besieged and battered city.

Rebels Reinforced.

Valladolid, Spain, Aug. 21 (AP).—Vastly reinforced rebel troops started forward today in the Guadarrama Mountains in an effort to tighten a noose of steel around Madrid.

Rebel headquarters were shifted here from Burgos and the advance troops of the well-armed, well-disciplined army were prepared to march tomorrow on the Somo Sierra Mountain front almost within sight of the capital.

Rebel leaders said their forces numbered 200,000 in the northern provinces alone, swelled from 25,000 in mid-July.

Gen. Milan Astray, the one-eyed founder of the Spanish foreign legion, reviewed 2,000 tassel-capped fighters who will lead the attack against Madrid's northern gateway.

The youthful "Falangistas," composed of the Fascist troops of Jose Primo de Rivera, son of the late Spanish dictator, included many pretty young girls dressed as men.

Barcelona, Aug. 21 (AP).—Loyalist forces loosed a terrific artillery barrage against the city of Huesca near Zaragoza and succeeded in driving out the rebels, official reports stated.

Government troops, they said, prepared to enter the city, which was described as in ruins after the loyalist bombardment.

The national confederation of labor was reported to have assumed administration of government in the town of Granollers.

2 Entombed Miners Rescued; Bodies of Other 2 Recovered

By the United Press.

Moberly, Mo., Aug. 21.—Two of the four miners trapped for 72 hours in the Erzy coal mine here, were found alive today. Their two companions had died.

A rescue party brought A. W. McCann, 50, of Moberly, to the surface. He was well and strong. Emergency treatment had to be given to Demmer Sexton, 37, whose condition was critical.

Young Edward Stoner, jr., copartner in the mine venture with Sexton, and George T. Dameron, their colored mule driver, had succumber to poison gases.

McCann was brought to the surface by Coroner Jesse Maddox and State Mine Inspector Arnold Griffith in one of the huge iron buckets with which rescue workers had hoisted tons of debris from the caved-in mine.

His appearance was greeted with a great cheer by the hundreds of spectators. He waved and smiled. Then Maddox announced that Stoner had been found dead.

Stoner's young wife and 6-year-old daughter, Dolly, screamed. Mrs. Stoner muttered over and over, "Oh, my God." Then she fainted. Ed Stoner, sr., turned away with his head on his arm.

Meanwhile, at the 110-foot level of the mine, where the rescue party had been led to the miners' refuge by McCann's lusty shouts, men were working on Sexton, who was unconscious.

He was roused with stimulants. Rescue workers wrapped him in blankets and had him hoisted to the surface. Sexton's wife, who has remained calm throughout, said:

"I knew it all the time. That's why I've been waiting."

Bodies of Dameron and Stoner were brought up last. Dameron's

Heavy Rainfall Brings Relief In Torrid Heat

A heavy rainfall last night brought relief to a humid-soaked, sun-baked city.

But that relief, the weather man said, will be only temporary. Heat will regain its grips today, he said.

The shower, coming unexpectedly after a sunlit, cloudless day, was purely local in character. It sent the thermometer tumbling from a high of 94 at 3:15 p. m. to a comfortable figure of 69 at 9 p. m.

Swirling in gullies, the rain nearly disrupted traffic in various parts of the city. At the height of the storm, a south-bound street car on Fourteenth street, between G and F northwest, was held up for half an hour when its plow was torn off. Emergency crews were called to burn out the broken piece of machinery with acetylene torches.

Detective Firm Flouts Subpena, Senate May Sue

Senator Robert M. LaFollette yesterday threatened to prosecute representatives of an agency allegedly engaged in labor spy activity when they failed to appear before his special committee investigating interference with civil liberties.

Six officers of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., a detective agency, failed to appear after they had started proceedings in the United States District Court here and in Philadelphia to prevent their appearance before the committee.

LaFollette called their failure to appear the "grossest and most flagrant contempt of subpenas." He added that every legal action which could be taken would be instituted against the recalcitrant witnesses.

Meanwhile, investigators for the committee testified that some of the

Greenbelt Hold-up Plot Report Leads to Mobilization of Police

Reports of a planned holdup at Greenbelt, or "Tugwelltown," the suburban housing project of the Resettlement Administration, led to a mobilization of Prince Georges County policemen and deputies there yesterday.

It was pay day at Greenbelt. The 5,000 workers were given their wages of $150,000 or more in Treasury checks. These obviously would be of no use to holdup men.

However, it is the custom at Greenbelt for merchants—owners of cigar and soft-drink stands—to carry large supplies of currency on pay day and cash checks of the workers.

The holdup men, according to the reports, had marked these merchants as victims.

Thirty citizens of Hyattsville and the vicinity were sworn in as special policemen, and were sent to Greenbelt to aid regular Prince Georges County officers. All 30 were in plain clothes or overalls.

During the day an automobile loaded with strangers was turned back at the gates of Greenbelt. The men said they were New York newspaper reporters, bent on an inspection of the project. The gate tender, however, did not like their appearance and refused them admittance.

It was 6 p. m. when the last of the 5,000 workers were given their pay checks. Nothing untoward had happened until then. The officers, however, remained on or near the reservation until late last night.

The workers at Greenbelt, for the most part, have their sleeping quarters in Washington. None of them appeared to know anything about a holdup plot.

Blanton Race Today Called Even Contest

'Czar' of District Gains Since Primary Vote, Observers Believe.

Washington Foe Uses City Issues in Texas Congress Battle.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Eastland, Tex., Aug. 21.—The political future of Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Abilene, will be decided by the voters of the Seventeenth Congressional District in a second, or "run-off," primary election tomorrow.

Blanton, energetic and noisy, first went to the House of Representatives after the election of 1916, and he has been a member ever since except for the time in 1928 when he made an unsuccessful race for the Senate.

Over that long period he has gained the reputation of being a "czar" where District of Columbia legislation is concerned in Congress.

Last month, following the regular Democratic primary, it looked as if Blanton faced almost certain political extinction. He had run a poor second. On the eve of the run-off primary, however, Blanton is conceded at least an even chance to win another term in the House.

Always a resourceful campaigner, he has made a whirlwind tour of the district in the last three weeks, crying out that "tax-dodging plutocrats in Washington," Communists and the utility interests are supporting his opponent, County Judge Clyde L. Garrett, of Eastland.

In the regular primary election in July the result in round figures was: Garrett, 24,000; Blanton, 19,000, and Fred O. Jaye, 7,500.

Garrett led by a good plurality, but since he did not get a clear majority—the combined Blanton-Jaye vote being greater than his—a run-off election was ordered.

Jaye, a Townsendite, has come out for Blanton, but how much good that will do the man from Abilene is problematical. The Townsend Plan organization in the district emphasized that it would not indorse either Garrett or Blanton.

Blanton's supporters, who admittedly were scared last month, were cheered by something that happened here last night in the home town of the popular Judge Garrett.

Heckler Is Booed.

Blanton came here to speak, and a large respectful crowd turned out to hear him. Once a man interrupted Blanton, and the crowd turned on the heckler with boos.

It is believed by some that if Blanton does not win tomorrow's election he will contest the result. Last night Blanton told the Eastland audience that Garrett maintains headquarters at a building in which J. E. Lewis, sr., is a stockholder. Lewis is district manager of the Texas Electric Service Co., which Blanton asserts is a subsidiary of Hopson's Electric Bond & Share Co. Hopson's company threatened his political annihilation after he voted for the holding company death sentence bill, Blanton said last night.

Blanton said County School Superintendent C. S. Eldridge told Joe Barnett, of Carbon, small farming town in this county, early in the campaign that three organizations "were out to get Blanton's scalp and he (Garrett) wouldn't have to spend much money."

Clippings from Washington newspapers, Blanton declared, showed "Washington plutocrats" are behind

East Florida Hit By Tropic Storm; Damage Is Slight

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 21 (U.P.).—A tropical disturbance, accompanied by guests of winds with a velocity of 40 to 55 miles an hour, tonight swept the east Florida coast north of Titusville.

The Weather Bureau reported the storm died out over the interior of Northern Florida. There was no serious damage.

Residents of the coast section from Titusville 125 miles north to Jacksonville, warned by advisories of the Weather Bureau hurricane warning system, had prepared for the storm. Windows had been boarded. Municipal fire, police and electric repair departments and Coast Guard vessels stood by for emergency duty.

Roosevelt Maps Drought Trip; Landon Asks Nonpartisan Aid

Not Concerned About Where Credit Goes, Kansan Asserts.

He Pledges Party To Help Recovery

For Any Measure That Will Promote Jobs, He Informs Iowans.

By the United Press.

Aboard Landon Special Train, Aug. 21.—Gov. Alf M. Landon, en route to the East for campaign speeches, swung through the blistered Midwestern farm States into Chicago today extending the pledge of his party to keep the drought problem out of politics.

The Republican Presidential nominee, who soon will confer on drought problems with President Roosevelt and the Governors of Midwestern States, said that "he would combine our initiative and our efforts as did our pioneer forefathers" to meet the farm-belt problems.

"But no individual and no organization should meet this drought problem from the point of view of politics," Landon said in a speech at Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"I am not concerned about where the credit goes in the solution of the problem of our drought—just so we meet it in a humane and a constructive and a sensible way."

Pledged to Recovery.

The Kansas Governor also pledged the party to take advantage of every helpful method of promoting recovery and re-employment if the Republicans win in November.

His statement on the impending drought conference added another touch of drama to the meeting of the two Presidential candidates in Iowa next month.

"Entirely aside from politics and this year's campaign, we are facing the emergency of the 1936 drought," he said. "Being a Kansan, I know what it means. We have suffered there possibly to even greater extent than you have here, with your rich black soil. The Kansas people have met this problem for the last several years bravely, just as I know that the people of Iowa are meeting this emergency with the courage and fortitude that is so characteristic of them."

"Prospects Looking Fine."

The Illinois delegation, boarding the train at Cedar Rapids, told Landon that "prospects are looking fine now in our State." The delegation included George F. Harding, national committeeman; Otis Glenn, former Senator and candidate for the Senate; Louis Seaverns, of the Republican finance committee; John L. East, of Chicago, and Hanford McNider, former Assistant Secretary of War.

W. E. Grimes, head of the department of economics and sociology at Kansas State Agricultural College, and Dean L. E. Call, of the college, will be among those accompanying Landon to the conference. Representative Clifford Hope, of Kansas, head of the Republican agricultural advisory committee, was aboard the Landon train, but was not certain whether he would attend.

National Chairman John Hamilton had been expected to join the train at Chicago, but it was announced he was taking a rest and probably would join the party in New York State next week.

Must Keep Politics Out.

At Cedar Rapids, the largest crowd in Iowa greeted Landon as he renewed his plea for voters to support "the American way" of doing things. The Governor spoke from a wooden platform in the park near the station.

The drought problem, he said, must be solved "by combining our initiative and our efforts but politics must be kept out."

"One of the fundamental principles of the Republican Party," Landon told Iowa farmers, "is to promote recovery and provide jobs. If any measure will provide jobs, I am for it, and if there is any measure that will hinder recovery and hinder re-employment, I am against it."

Landon received at Carroll, Iowa, a telegraphic invitation from President Roosevelt asking him to attend the drought conference. He already had read news dispatches announcing that the invitation had been sent and, strolling into the press car, said that "of course" he would attend.

Jeffersonian Democrats Chart Roosevelt Fight in Richmond

Richmond, Aug. 21.—Declaring themselves unwilling to submit "to the dictates of those who no longer carry out the principles of our party and observe its pledges," approximately 50 Virginia "Jeffersonian Democrats" met here today to organize for the defeat of President Roosevelt in the November election.

In a statement issued after a three-hour closed session, the group commended the declaration of the national Jeffersonian Democrats adopted at the anti-Roosevelt meeting in Detroit, and announced the appointment of S. D. Timberlake, jr., prominent Staunton attorney, as chairman of the committee on permanent organization.

John B. Jenkins, jr., of Norfolk, presided as temporary chairman today with William A. Moncure, jr., of Richmond, temporary secretary.

Moncure said after the meeting that permanent headquarters probably would be established in Richmond, and an active campaign would be waged against the "New Deal."

"President Roosevelt's 'New Deal' Administration has not only failed to carry out the pledges of the 1932 platform of the Democratic Party to which all true Democrats subscribed, but has positively repudiated them," their statement declared.

"It has advocated policies and laws destructive of the fundamental principles of our party, of the Constitution of the United States and the American system of Government. It has ignored the principles

Operation Rise Of $100 an Acre Asked by Parks

By James D. Secrest.

An increase of $100 an acre for maintaining some 5,600 acres of park land is asked for the fiscal year 1938 in estimates of the National Capital Parks Office released yesterday by the District Commissioners. The additional money is essential, the park authorites said, if Washington's famed parks are to be maintained satisfactorily.

Only the WPA program and the expenditure of emergency conservation funds, the report stated, have enabled the park office to maintain the parks as well as it has done.

This proposed jump in the maintenance cost of Washington parks from $129 to $225 an acre accounts for a 30 per cent gain in the parks office estimates, or a jump from the 1937 appropraition of $908,410 to $1,172,552.

Release of the estimates of the parks office and of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which asks $352,500 as against a current appropriation of $337,500, followed disclosure of the requests of the police and fire de-

Europe Called A Fertile Field For Trade Pacts

By Robert C. Albright.

Great Britain, Germany and other European countries yesterday were seen as a fertile field for United States reciprocal trade agreements, and anxious to participate in the pacts, by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper. Roper has just returned from a European tour.

Sweeping indorsement of "universal" application of reciprocal agreements, with no nation overlooked, came from Roper in the face of recent unfavorable United States trade balances with the world, and charges by George N. Peek and others that the new tariff policy has offered this country "to the world at a bargain."

Although July trade statistics will not be available until next week, excess of imports over exports in the first six months gave the United States its first unfavorable half-year trade balance in 10 years.

Roper said the agreement between the United States and Canada had attracted foreign commercial interest, particularly in England. He said the opinion of business men in Great Britain is that the Canadian

WPA to Give 15 Simultaneous Performances Of 'It Can't Happen Here,' Scrapped by Movies

The Works Progress Administration announced last night that arrangements had been completed with Sinclair Lewis, Nobel Prize winning author, for production of a play based on his most recent novel, "It Can't Happen Here."

Fifteen cities will witness simultaneous production of the play.

A motion picture version of the novel, which deals with the coming of a dictatorship to the United States, was canceled earlier this year. At that time, Lewis said the cancellation was due to pressure being brought by representatives of Germany and Italy.

The play, which will be a dramatization by Lewis and his collaborator, J. C. Moffett, will be staged October 20 by 28 WPA theatrical companies composed of certified needy actors.

"So far as it is known this will be the first time that an American stage play will be produced simultaneously in cities from coast to coast," said Hallie Flanagan, national director of the WPA Federal theater project.

The cities selected for the performance are Boston, Newark, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Chicago, New York, New Orleans, Cleveland, Dallas, Tacoma, Indianapolis Syracuse, Detroit and either Jacksonville or Miami.

In concluding arrangements with the WPA, Lewis said:

"In spite of commercial offers for the dramatization of 'It Can't Happen Here' I prefer to give it to the Federal Theater for two reasons—first, because of my tremendous enthusiasm for its work and, second, because I know I can depend on the Federal Theater for a nonpartisan point of view.

"I will give completely all of my time and work in aiding the casting, writing, rewriting and so forth with the New York City project and will personally supervise the New York presentations."

Lewis will furnish the scrip to the WPA Federal Theater in time for casting and rehearsals to begin in the selected cities September 7.

Each WPA theater producer of the play will act independently under the general production direction of Francis Bosworth, supervisor of play reading in the New York City Play Bureau of the Federal Theater.

Each company will design its own scenery to fit its own region, officials said. Costumes will be designed upon regional characteristics.

WPA officials said that thus each production of "It Can't Happen Here" would be keyed to the section of the United States in which it was being shown.

Nine Stricken States to Be Visited in Swing Starting Tuesday.

Formal Invitation to Conference Is Sent G.O.P. Nominee.

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 21.—President Roosevelt completed today an itinerary which will take him into nine drought States, then formally invited Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican Presidential candidate, to a general discussion of the drought situation in Des Moines, September 1.

The Governors of Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma and Iowa, and United States Senators from these States and Kansas also were asked to the Des Moines meeting.

Executives of 11 other States were invited to similar parleys, along with Senators and other State and Federal officials.

Landon, now invading the East for his first campaign speeches, promptly accepted Mr. Roosevelt's bid.

Signs Loan Order.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt signed an executive order to help distressed farmers by increasing from $200 to $400 the maximum amount the Farm Credit Administration may loan to individuals for winter wheat seed.

Acting under the emergency relief act of 1935, the President issued the following order:

"The amount which may be lent to any one borrower (inclusive of any loan or loans heretofore granted to such borrower under the provisions of the above act and this executive order) shall not exceed the sum of $200, except that the amount which may be lent to any one borrower for the production of winter wheat (inclusive of any loan or loans as aforesaid) shall not exceed the sum of $400, and each applicant for a loan shall establish to the satisfaction of the proper officer or employe of the Farm Credit Administration, under such conditions as the governor may prescribe, that the applicant is unable to procure such loan from any other source:

"Provided, that preference shall be given to the applications of farmers whose cash requirements are small."

Late in the day the President turned to politics, charting campaign maneuvers in the seclusion of his home on the Hudson with James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Along with W. Forges Morgan, national committee treasurer, and Frank Walker, chairman of the finance committee, Farley was to spend the night.

Farley to Report.

Farley was prepared to pass along reports received daily at New York headquarters from State Democratic leaders brought in to discuss campaign strategy.

One of the State chieftains, Charles Sawyer, of Cincinnati, Ohio, Democratic national committeeman, dropped in at Hyde Park and said he advised the President there would be a "hard fight" in Ohio. He added that "the trend today is toward Roosevelt," and said he had asked the President to speak in Ohio late in the campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt's plans for his own political speeches were described by his aids as nebulous, although there were intimations in one quarter that the President might make half a dozen major addresses before November.

The drought State trip has been described by the President as non-

Garrett and are aiding his campaign by contributions.

The Representative said he had evidence a Washington newspaper received $1,500 from utilities for printing an editorial against him.

Apropos of his fight on District of Columbia appropriations, Blanton explained that the National Capital has paved streets, sidewalks, a light plant, 150 schools, hospitals, bridges, parks, swimming pools, tennis courts, golf courses, polo grounds and playgrounds as a result of the Government's "50-50" law for the District.

"But you don't get any benefit," Blanton told the voters here. "Only the Washington people get the benefit. I held hearings night and day. I know how to get the truth out of witnesses."

He told of Washington citizens who had made $20,000 to $75,000 a year and yet "didn't pay as much taxes as an ordinary citizen in Eastland" until he stopped the practice. Blanton said if he lined up 100 of the Eastland audience and 100 of Washington citizens the former group would have the "kind of character" that makes men and women worth while.

He took it as a compliment that 500,000 Washington citizens "despise" him. The Representative read from Washington newspapers which he contended showed a campaign fund was being raised to defeat him. He ridiculed the $5 which Bernard L. Henning, of Washington, said he sent Garrett. He read a letter from Henning which was printed in a Garrett circular.

Charges Monopoly.

"Clyde says Henning is a taxicab driver," Blanton said laughingly. "Why he had the biggest taxicab monopoly in the world."

He continued by detailing how Henning allegedly operated taxis charging $1.50 for ten-block rides, and how he later took the monopoly away from the operator. He said reasonable zone rates were established and 3,000 former service men are now in business as drivers.

He told the audience how seniority "means everything" and that he has recognition with legislators, bureaus, Cabinet members and the President.

In connection with the utility charge Blanton said employes of the Texas Electric Service Co. here and the Community Natural Gas Co. in this county were instructed to vote for Garrett.

Communists, too, Blanton charged were out for his scalp because of his efforts to curb teaching of their doctrine in Washington schools.

"They teach there is no God, that all churches should be abolished and torn down, that there should be a regimentation of women and that sexual immorality of little girls is all right," Blanton declared.

Denies Utility Backing.

Judge Garrett, speaking at Abilene, denied support by utilities, and that he is a tax dodger. Blanton's policies in picking postmasters in his district also were criticized.

Garrett charged that Blanton had attempted to perfect an "unholy alliance" to obtain Townsend votes. "Although I am not seeking election on the Townsend Plan, I, nevertheless, covet Townsend votes and predict that I will receive from 85 to 95 per cent of Townsend votes cast in Saturday's election," he declared.

Garrett resented the invasion of Wright Patman to aid Blanton. He said the invasion was evidence Blanton is desperate.

Trade

agreements "are working to the advantage of both countries."

Prior to the Roper statement, belief had been expressed in informed circles here that any likelihood of negotiations with England was far removed. Germany's interest in agreements of the bilateral type, and recent friction with this country over countervailing duties on her subsidized exports, only recently withdrawn, did not improve prospects in that quarter.

Wants Universal Agreements.

Asked if he favored a trade agreement with Germany, he said that if he had his way he would try to make the trade agreements universal, and certainly would negotiate them with "all major countries."

"I found the Canadian agreement has arrested their attention, and the impression is that is it working well," he said.

He declared some business men in England expressed the belief "that recovery in the United States has been faster and more lasting than in England."

Discussing the European war threat, he said Europeans "appreciate that they have social and economic problems to work out, but would prefer to have them solved by negotiation and not resort to arms."

Enormous ships, he said, offer problems in safety, service and commercial spacing, while American vessels offer advantages from the standpoint of comfort and economy. Roper went to Europe and returned on the Manhattan. He said foreign competitors and other American lines were showing renewed interest in the cabin type of ship.

Would Draw Tourists.

Roper made promotional efforts in England looking to attracting European tourists to America, and even suggested winter "excursions" from England to Florida.

He said this country "is admittedly so far ahead of every other nation in the matter of air commerce, that it will take a long time for our nearest competitor to catch up with us."

Roper will confer with the President next week on appointment of the maritime authority to administer the new shipping law. He said he had a preliminary telephone conversation with the President on this subject in New York.

Politics and People

Apparent Let-Down in G. O. P. Campaign Was Expected; Rising Prices Hurt Roosevelt.

By Franklyn Waltman

THE view seems widespread, not only among political observers and commentators but among people you meet every day, that Gov. Alf M. Landon's campaign for the Presidency has been hesitating and halting, without force or direction.

If he has not lost ground in the last month, it is contended, at least, he has not made any substantial progress. Certainly, a number of persons who wish Gov. Landon well feel let-down, their enthusiasm dampened.

But it does not necessarily follow, as the New Deal spokesmen argue, that the Democrats have Gov. Landon down and that his chances for election have evaporated, never to return. Nor does it follow that because Gov. Landon has not rushed into print every third day with a momentous declaration he is a hazy, vague and wishy-washy fellow.

Such is the picture being painted by the New Deal publicity machine—and the latter is an extensive one with less than one-half of it on the Democratic National Committee pay roll. It is part of the strategy of the Democratic high command. But it may, before November, back-fire against its creators. For on numerous occasions Gov. Landon has demonstrated the ability and the courage to speak out when it became necessary to do so.

Any realistic examination of the present state of the campaign reveals without doubt that the Republican campaign has bogged down in the last month. But those familiar with politics expected that to happen. It was inevitable that there should have been a let-down after the acceptance speech. It always happens.

In the first place, Gov. Landon, pitted against the best showman in the history of American politics, is too smart to anticipate his major campaign addresses by discussing the issues piecemeal in press conferences. He wants his followers to reach a climax of enthusiasm two months from now when it means something in marshaling votes at the polls.

Thus, there was nothing for Gov. Landon to do but wait until the campaign in the field got under way. That point has now been reached, indeed earlier than usual in Presidential elections. Until now, Gov. Landon could not justly be criticized for addressing himself to the issues of the campaign and revealing his program. After his trip East, he will be open to that criticism unless he speaks specifically and candidly.

In the second place, Gov. Landon and his immediate advisory council have found it necessary virtually to rebuild the Republican organization throughout the country. Instead of finding a party machine operating smartly and efficiently—such as the Democrats have—he found an organization in an advanced stage of dry-rot.

This organization work has required time and effort. It also has resulted in a clash of viewpoints and internal controversy, jealousy and resentment. These factors have caused the Republican machine to jolt and rumble and have deprived it of force and direction. But again that inevitably happens whenever either political party goes through a period of rehabilitation.

Important in the winning of Presidential elections as are efficient political organizations and stirring speeches by the candidate, they, nevertheless, seldom are conclusive. After all, elections are decided by men and women who vote in response to their own interests or prejudices.

For instance, the increasing cost of living may easily become the paramount issue in this campaign. That is to say, more men and women may be persuaded to vote for Gov. Landon as a protest against increased living costs than on any other ground. Already this issue is taking form, with the Republican strategists pressing home the advantage they possess in this situation and the Democratic leaders showing signs of genuine concern.

The hand of Republican headquarters is seen behind the appearance in butcher shops around the country of signs which purport to demonstrate to the housewife that approximately one-third of the price she pays for meat is for taxes. Such a portrayal instantly creates resentment against those in power. It makes all the talk about the increasing cost of government and high taxes graphic and personal.

The Democrats may protest that the only Federal taxes entering into the cost of meat are income taxes—that the other taxes are local, county and State levies. Nevertheless, the point is brought home to the housewife that the expenditures of government—of whatever nature—is depriving her table of food, either in the form of quality or quantity.

As this campaign goes on it appears the Democrats will constantly have to combat resentment over the rising cost of living. Even though it is due to the drought or to local taxes or some other cause, the Roosevelt regime will be blamed for the increase. It is doubtful whether logic answers and arguments will prevail. The only escape for the New Deal is that the rise in food prices is halted or held in abeyance until after the election.

In the last month I have heard numerous discussions among women acquaintances of the rising price of food. On virtually every occasion when an effort has been made to defend the New Deal someone has said: "Didn't they kill all those little pigs?" Arguments that the slaughter of the little pigs happened three years ago and has no relation to the present situation do not seem to prevail.

Ironically, the journalist who did as much as anyone to publicize the slaughter of the little pigs and arouse national indignation over their fate, now is attached to the publicity division of the Democratic National Committee.

Parking Permits Limits Proposed

On the ground that Governmental officials are abusing the special parking permit privilege, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer Thursday proposed a restrictive regulation to the District Commissioners.

The regulation would prohibit holders of the permits from violating "existing traffic regulations applicable to the area in which such official parking space has been established" and would bar them from parking their cars in reserved official spaces located within less than two blocks of the building in which they are employed.

Two Men Executed.

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 21 (AP).—Two colored men, John Kinyon, 73, convicted of assault in Granville County, and Willie Lee Gallman, 21, Forsyth murderer, died today in the lethal gas chamber at central prison. Although no age records are kept at the prison, officials said they believed Kinyon was the oldest man ever executed here.

wife had remained calm, apparently hoping against hope, until she saw the form of her husband of two weeks. Then she became hysterical.

The Sexton family had been waiting in a hearse near the mine opening. They jumped down from the unusual perches and danced around hugging each other.

The miners were found in an abandoned tunnel. They had built a barricade against the poison gases, but had left it several times when they thought the air was clear.

Rescue workers, who burrowed down through more than 80 feet of fallen debris, encountered black damp and white damp, two of the worst perils of mining.

By hugging the floor, Sexton and McCann apparently found enough oxygen to sustain themselves. The mule the miners were using to haul their coal had died from the fumes.

Sexton rallied after being given stimulants and physicians held high hopes for his recovery. McCann was able to talk briefly of the ordeal.

"Stoner died about two hours after the cave-in," he said. "Dameron went shortly afterward."

200 Join in Rescue Work.

The miners were trapped between a mass of burning timbers, smouldering embers and dirt, and the fumes from the blasting operations they had performed just after the fire broke out on the surface.

Two hundred miners from a score of mines in central Missouri participated in the herculean job of clearing out the three-quarters filled main shaft.

Physicians said Sexton would have expired had the rescue been delayed another 30 minutes. They ascribed McCann's and Sexton's survival to their superior physical condition.

Jeffersonians

of States rights, established the greatest centralized national bureaucracy and incurred the most enormous debt in the history of any nation. It has advocated paternalism and natonal control of local affairs and measures destructive of State sovereignty and local self-government.

"We have, therefore, concluded that the preservation of the principles of the Democratic Party, the welfare of Virginia, of the South and of the Nation can best be assured by the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt at the November, 1936, election.

"The reasons which have impelled us as Democrats to disavow the Roosevelt Administration are fundamental and self-evident. Nothing short of absolute conviction that the 'New Deal' is destructive of true democracy and of the sound principle of personal liberty and representative government would have induced us as real Democrats to take this step.

"Seized Party Machinery."

"The Roosevelt 'New Deal' Administration has seized the machinery and organization of the Democratic Party, and while advocating policies fundamentally opposed to our convictions as citizens and Democrats and grossly violative of the party's 1932 platform, is demanding a blind subservience to its autocratic mandates.

"We are unwilling to submit our beliefs to the dictates of those who no longer carry out the principles of our party and observe its pledges. We, therefore, hold it to be the duty of the rank and file of Virginia Democrats to take the initiative in re-establishing the principles of the party and opposing the re-election of those responsible for their violation.

"We commend and approve the declaration of the National Jeffersonian Democrats adopted at Detroit.

"It was unanimously resolved by the conference that a State-wide organization be immediately effected to carry out these purposes under the name of the Jeffersonian Democrats of Virginia."

Asked if their efforts to defeat Roosevelt meant voting for Gov. Alf Landon, the Republican presidential candidate, Moncure said he thought the statement "spoke for itself, but you may put your own interpretation upon it."

AAA Dismissals.

AAA dismissals are not likely to begin until November 1 at the earliest, according to T. Weed McNally, business assistant to the administrator.

Previous deadlines were based on the belief that the papers for the 1936 wheat payments would have arrived in Washington by this month, McNally explained. However, virtually none of the papers has come in and wheat payments are expected to be delayed until September and October. Employes are now being allowed to take sick leave up to October 31 instead of September 30, as previously ruled.

About 1,200 clerks are expected to be let out. There is to be no wholesale overnight dismissals, at least two weeks notice being promised in every instance. The business office is attempting now to induce as many of the employes as possible to transfer to the soil conservation program staff in their home States. But many of the clerks are reluctant to leave Washington. More serious is the problem faced by residents from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, who have no State program to turn to.

The separations are to be outright dismissals, not furloughs and will be based on the usual civil service procedure, said McNally. Married couples will be the first to suffer, with efficiency and seniority as the other yardsticks.

The net result of the special meeting of the AAA Lodge, No. 116, of the A. F. G. E. Thursday night was the continuance of the committee headed by President John E. Dwyer. This committee will contact the administrator's office and keep the members informed on dismissal developments.

Fleas.

Supervisors at the bonus bond section on the fifth floor of the Internal Revenue Building are emphatic in denying that there was any temporary stoppage of work Thursday morning because of fleas.

The fleas, according to the story told us, were on hand when the several hundred temporary workers arrived for their morning's work. As the fleas grew busier and busier, more and more of the girls took to scratching. Finally one of the girls, our informant says she was a Dixie lassie, complained to someone in authority. All work was ordered stopped until the flea-infected rooms could be disinfected.

"Overexaggerated and untrue" was how the supervisors described this story. One woman angrily wanted to know "where this flea story originated. I've been bothered all day by telephone calls and visits from photographers and reporters. I wish I knew who started that story."

Well, anyway, whether it was because of fleas or newspapermen, there was some excitement.

A two-birds-with-one-stone leave is being enjoyed by John Wilson, of Navy Medical Records, vacationing in Texas. John is dividing his time between visits to the home folks and the Texas Centennial Exposition.

There is an air of much-ado around A. F. G. E. lodges and headquarters these days that reminds us of the uncertain pre-"Tap Day" weeks at college when the fraternities and sororities were busy lining up new members.

Pledging Delegates.

With the A. F. G. E. lodges, however, it is not the lining up of new members but the pledging of the delegates to the Detroit convention that is proving so puzzling. Although most of the delegates have already been selected the lodges in general are planning to hold meetings in the next two weeks to decide whether to instruct their delegates, and if so, how.

What makes the business of giving the delegates instructions so troubling is not only that there are no outstanding candidates in the field for the presidency but because so many other vital issues are due to be aired at the convention.

We know of one lodge that couldn't afford a delegate and decided not to send its votes by proxy because it didn't know how to instruct the proxy and couldn't be sure the proxy would vote the way it wanted. Another lodge is conducting an informal referendum of its members on how the delegates should be pledged.

Even the "New Deal" and conservative lodges, committed as they are to definite programs, have not yet determined on a presidential candidate. The conservatives probably will run either Col. Charles I. Stengle or Robert H. Alcon, while the No. 1 new deal candidate thus far is Paul David, of the T. V. A. Lodge. However we hear rumors of a "strong liberal candidate" from New York State who may rival David.

It is the middle-of-the-ground lodges who have our sympathy, for no matter how they instruct their delegates the situation is bound to change drastically immediately preceding and during the convention. Probably the safest form or pledging these days would be for lodges to instruct their delegates to adopt some general attitude. Delegates could be instructed to favor either the conservatives, on the left-wingers, or to work for a compromies.

Catholic Bishops Fear Nazi; Close Sessions

Fulda, Germany, Aug. 21 (AP).—German Catholic bishops, concerned over the possibility of repressive measures against the church, closed their conference today after but three days of sessions. In previous years the meetings have lasted a full week.

The bishops maintained strict secrecy concerning their decisions, but it was learned authoritatively they were especially worried over reports that the Nurnberg Nazi party convention, beginning September 6, might take a hand in religious education of youth.

Car Kills Boy; Grandmother Dies of Shock

Woman Collapses on Seeing Child Dash in Front of Automobile.

Edward Richard Hurley, 5, died last night in Casualty Hospital a few hours after his grandmother was killed by the shock of seeing him struck by an automobile.

Edward died of a fractured skull and other injuries. His grandmother, Mrs. Blanche Hurley, 57, died soon after he was struck by an automobile in front of his home, 1813 M street northeast.

Mrs. Hurley was standing by a window when she saw the child dart in front of an automobile. The machine struck the child. She fainted.

Casualty Hospital Ambulance was summoned for the boy. It stopped to minister to the woman who died soon after the ambulance's arrival.

Edward was taken to Casualty in an automobile.

John Walker Baxter, of 2328 Nichols avenue southeast, was held as driver of the machine.

The father of the child, William Hurley, truck driver, did not know of the double tragedy—of his mother's death and his son's fatal injuries—until hours after the accident occurred.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said Mrs. Hurley died of shock. An inquest will be held in the boy's death.

29th Reviewed By Gen. Craig; Medals Given

High Officials Are Present at National Guard's Ceremonies.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Indiantown Gap, Pa., Aug. 21.—Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army, reviewed the Twenty-ninth National Guard Division here today, while Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, Lieut. Col. Daniel I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner, and other civic and military officials looked on.

The division review was preceded by a review of all Maryland troops of the division, at which Sons of the American Revolution medals were presented to the outstanding man of each company. After the division parade, the First Infantry of Maryland again was formed on the field to receive the Gen. Pershing Trophy of the National Guard Association of the United States for outstanding marksmanship.

While lowering skies threatened momentary downpour the division was formed in deep masses on a front almost a mile wide while the rear formations were almost obscured from the reviewing stand by haze. As Gen. Craig and the other dignitaries arrived, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth, and his staff, mounted their horses and rode to the front of the line. Gen. Craig then mounted, and, accompanied by an aid, rode to the reviewing line.

Capt. Carey Ellis Stern, jr., of Richmond, Va., of the Twenty-ninth Division staff, was injured in the course of the parade.

As the Blue and Gray division passed in review for the first time since the World War, the hundreds of spectators cheered and nine bands played.

Designation and history of each unit as it passed the reviewing stand was announced over a loud-speaker by Lieut. Col. Edwin P. Conquest, of Richmond, division intelligence officer. Traffic and control of the spectators devolved upon the Twenty-ninth military police, commanded by Maj. William T. Roy, of Washington.

Others Seated In Stand.

Among those seated in the reviewing stand beside Gov. Nice and Commissioner Sultan were Maj. Gen. Edward Croft, chief of infantry; Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding, chief of the National Guard Bureau; Maj. Albert J. Bowley, commanding the Third Corps Area; also,

Maj. Gen. E. C. Shannon, commanding the Twenty-eighth Division of Pennsylvania; Col. Fay Brabson, of the War Department general staff; Col. Louis A. Kunzig, plans and training officer of the Third Corps Area; Col. J. A. Baer, chief of staff of the Third Corps Area; Col. A. F. Comiskey, National Guard officer of the Third Corps Area; Maj. Coleman B. Mark, superintendent of the Indiantown Gap Military Reservation and famlies of the commanding general and brigadier general.

The Pershing Trophy was handed to Gen. Craig by the two best marksmen of the First Infantry, Corpl. Ernest Bell, of Company K, Centerville, and Private Abraham Gurson, of Company G, Cumberland, who tied with a score of 237 out of a posible 250.

Trophy Given Colonel.

Gen. Craig handed the trophy to Col. D. John Markey, of Frederick, commanding the First Maryland. The trophy was awarded to the infantry regiment of the National Guard which had the highest percentage of qualifications as marksmen, or better, in the United States.

The Fifty-eighth Brigade was formed prior to the division review to receive medals of the Sons of the American Revolution awarded to the outstanding man of each company. The medals were presentd by Judge T. Scott Offutt, of the Maryland Court of Appeals, chairman of the citizenship committee, who later took the review with Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie.

The review was the last of the Fifty-eighth to be commanded by Gen. Bowie, who retires in November. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, Annapolis, and former prohibition administrator, has been named to the post to succeed hime.

The child, Albert N. Denhan, choked to death when he caught his neck in the top of a screen-inclosed crib. The death was discovered when Mrs. Denham came into the child's bedroom to remove a milk bottle. She had fed the baby shortly before.

"Distance Lends Enchantment—"

JAMES THOMAS SYKES, JR.,

14, of Los Angeles, has been all over the United States, traveling in freight cars. He heard that Washington was a rich city, abounding in jobs, so he decided to settle down here. Before he could get his share of gold, howver, the police took him to the Receiving Home.

'Pot of Gold' and Parents' Fate Lure 3 Youngsters to Capital

Two Hitch-Hike From Marshall, Va., in Quest of News About Relatives; Third Rides Rails From California Seeking His Fortune.

A couple of youngsters who are trying to find out whether they are orphans, and a 14-year-old lad who rode freights all the way from Los Angeles because he'd heard "Washington is a rich city and you can get a job there easy," arrived in the Capital early yesterday.

But before they got started on their search for work or parents, the police took them to the Receiving Home. All three were philosophical about this turn of affairs. The lad from California—James Thomas Sykes, jr.—thinks he's even stumbled into a temporary job. At his request he's going to help out with the dish washing and potato peeling at the home.

The other youngsters—Alfred Dauvin, 10, and his 14-year-old brother, Philip—weren't so interested in work. They've had plenty of it in the last year. What they're looking for is a place to live so they can go to school this fall. Last spring Philip had to quit his studies to work so he could support the younger Alfred.

"I failed the eighth grade after I'd missed so much," Philip said.

Know Nothing of Parents.

With frequent promptings from Alfred, the older boy told of events which led up to their wandering into Washington early yesterday. For five years they have not seen or heard from their father, Alfred Dauvin. They don't know whether he is dead or alive. They do know that their mother married for the second time about 18 months ago.

Last August she sent them to a farm near Marshall, Va., to live.

"It was fine for a while," said Philip. "She sent the farmer money for our board and we helped him with the cows and chickens and other things and went to school. We liked it all right."

But the first of last March, Philip explained, their stepfather, Harry Bermudez, died, and the money for their board stopped coming. They haven't heard from their mother since that time. When they reached Washington yesterday they learned she had moved, and no one seems to know where she is.

Older Brother Quits School.

"Well," continued Philip, "the farmer couldn't let us stay for nothing and yet he hated to send us away when we didn't have any place to go."

Finally plans were made for the older brother to stop school and do enough work around the place to pay for the food both of them ate. He plowed and harrowed, helped feed 15 head of cattle and milk 13 cows, in addition to working with the chickens.

"I guess I did a man's work," he said proudly.

"I used to get up and help get breakfast and chop the wood and do a lot of other jobs," put in 10-year-old Alfred.

But now, with fall coming, both boys want to go to school this winter, so they decided to come back to Washington and try to find their mother or father. They hitch-hiked the 75-mile distance and bought their food with $1.45 the farmer gave them when they started out.

Has a Nickel Left.

"I got a nickel left," boasted Philip.

They really hope, they said, that they'll be sent to live with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Tolf, at Charleroi, Pa.

"My granddad is a general mechanic and that's what I want to be," said Alfred.

"Me, too," said Philip.

Young Sykes, an experienced freight-train rider who has been over most of the country, says he wants a job as houseboy. If he can't get that he's willing to wash wishes in a restaurant. And if the District decides he can't stay here he'll go back to California and start school again.

Rites Are Tomorrow For Mrs. Buchanan

Last rites for Mrs. Eugenia Moore Buchanan, 67, of 1934 Calvert street northwest, who died Wednesday at her home, will be held at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest, at 10 a. m. today. Burial in Arlington National Cemetery will follow.

Mrs. Buchanan is survived by her husband, William G. Buchanan; two sisters, Mrs. Kate M. Coleman, of Newport News, Va., and Mrs. Florence Cline, of Merryfield, Va., and a brother, Charles A. Moore, of Vienna, Va.

Rites for Mrs. Wardell Set for Wilmington, Del.

Last rites for Mrs. Anne E. Wardell, 77, who died Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Calaway, 17 Sherman avenue, Takoma Park, Md., will be held today at 1:30 p. m. at the residence of her son, Robert A. Wardell, in Wilmington, Del.

Mrs. Wardell, a native of Wilmington, had made her home in Takoma Park for the past 12 years.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Calaway, Miss Dorothy Wardell, and Mrs. F. G. Wilcox, and three sons, J. H. Wardell, Robert A. Wardell and Walter L. Wardell.

Couple Shot Dead Sitting in Machine

Watsonville, Calif., Aug. 21 (U.P.). An unidentified assassin, firing a rifle through the rear window of a parked automobile, killed Austin W. Martin and a woman tentatively identified as Grace Mae Ayers, 28, and wounded a 2-year-old girl here today.

The slayer fled in an automobile after throwing the still-smoking rifle into the rear of the Martin machine.

Mrs. A. W. Story witnessed the tragedy. As she drove her own car into the driveway at her home, she saw "an elderly man" poke a rifle through the rear window of the parked Martin car and fire. Then he leaped into an automobile standing nearby and drove off.

Italy Will Keep Her Hands Off In Spanish War

Agrees to Non-Intervention Pact; Britain Warns on Ship Searches.

By the United Press.

Rome, Aug. 21.—Italy tonight accepted French proposals for an international pact of nonintervention in the Spanish civil war.

Official announcement that hitherto divergent French and Italian attitude had been harmonized followed conversations between Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and Count Charles P. de Chambrun, French ambassador.

Italy's acceptance will make it possible to conclude a nonintervention pact unless German diplomatic difficulties with the Madrid popular front government caus efurther delay.

The Italian note, handed to Chambrun by Ciano, pledges Italy to forbid direct or indirect exportation of arms, munitions, airplanes, warships or war material of any kind for Spain, Spanish colonies or Spanish Morocco. It forbids, also, the transit of such goods through Italy.

Italy agreed to apply her prohibitions as pledged to all contracts in the course of execution throughout the nation and to keep other interested states informed of all measures taken under the agreement.

Italy's acceptance was made conditional upon similar acceptances by France, Great Britain, Germany and the Soviet Union.

London, Aug. 21.—Great Britain tonight warned Spanish waters would become a naval battleground if either Spanish belligerent molested British vessels on the high seas.

In pungent terms, Great Britain followed Nazi Germany's "force against force" ultimatum and warned the Spanish belligerents England would take "stern measures" against ships or warplanes which menace British lives or property.

If a British vessel suffered interference, it was said, commanders were instructed to drop three warning shots across the bows of the offending ship, then "take aim."

The British action, parallel to that of Germany, was declared independent of any moves of the Reich.

(Seven Nazi warships tonight were plowing toward Spain after the National-Socialist government of Chancellor Adolf Hitler demanded apologies for the reported search of the German vessel Kamerun by Spanish loyalist forces, and assurances that such an incident would not re-occur.)

(A high official of the Madrid government's state department said there was "nothing to say," when informed of the ultimatums of the Nazi and English governments, although the loyalists patently were anxious to avoid international complications caused by their fight against fascism.)

The London ultimatum was issued after it had been decided officially that neither of the Spanish warring factions under international custom was within its rights in searching neutral vessels on the high seas.

Nazis Protest on Radio.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 21.—The flood of diplomatic protests resulting from the Spanish civil war was increased today when the German ambassador in Moscow and the charge d'affaires in Madrid lodged vigorous representations against anti-German radio propaganda in Russia and Spain.

The official German news agency, reporting the government's action in ordering energetic protests, described radio broadcasts in Spain and the Soviet Union as "slanderous and provocative."

Details of the protests were not divulged but they were believed prompted by Spanish and Russian radio allegations that Germans were helping rebels in the Spanish civil war and by assertions broadcast from Russian radio stations that the German secret police participated in the alleged Trotzky-Zinoviev-Kamenev plot against the life of Dictator Josef Stalin.

Portugal Revolt Denied.

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Aug. 21.—Reports that the Spanish revolution had spread to Portugal were declared by government officials tonight to have been "totally unfounded."

Commander Jayne Athias, general secretary to the president, said President Oscar Carmona was "quite well and happy."

(Reports reaching London earlier said he had been killed.)

Government officials said tonight the country remained quiet.

Malaga Revolt Claimed.

Coruna, Spain, Aug. 21 (AP).—The Fascist rebel broadcasting station here declared tonight the previously loyalist garrison at the southern city of Malaga had revolted and a furious battle was going on in the streets.

The station also declared Jacinto Benavente, winner of the Nobel prize for literature in 1923, and the two Quintero brothers, leading Spanish dramatists, had died in Madrid.

(Benavente won the 1923 Nobel award with his play, "Bonds of Interest." He visited the United States in that year and was honored at a dinner in New York.

(Benavente had been held by Leftists three weeks ago, but was released.)

Commanded by Capt. Gonzalo Uribarri, iron-fisted warrior, the hard-bitten fighters took Guadeloupe, southwest of Madrid, and then advanced against Merida and insurgent bases in Caceres Province.

Fortify Positions.

Loyalists in the Guadarrama Mountains north of Madrid attacked rebels and after bitter hand-to-hand fighting advanced 5 miles beyond Paguerinos to the occupation of Gargantillas, Cueva and Valiente. They fortified their positions and prepared for fresh advances under Lieut. Col. Rubio.

The loyalist advance in the Guadarramas was made in the face of severe enemy aerial attacks on their columns moving out of Escorial in motor trucks.

Severe fighting was reported at Cordoba.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 21.—Hand-to hand combat broke out on this battle front tonight, substantiating reports an attempt to mediate the Spanish civil war had proved futile.

Government troops, under "do or die" orders, recaptured two hills taken earlier in the day by rebels. Insurgent patrols on the hills a few miles southwest of here fired on the Irun-San Sebastian highway.

U. S. Arrests Trio As White Slavers

The Federal Buerau of Investigation reported another victory yesterday in its new drive against white slavery. From the office of Diretcor J. Edgar Hoover came announcement of the arrest in New York City of three Italians wanted in Connecticut for violation of the white slave traffic act.

The three—Joseph Petrucelli, Arthur Tasselli and Bentazzo Enrico—are alleged to belong to a vice ring which brings girls into Connecticut and places them in houses of prostitution. Federal agents have arrested 16 men and women in their investigation of the ring.

"The investigation to date," said an official statement, "has indicated the girls used by this ring are brought to Connecticut from Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Ordinarily, the girls are believed to be brought to an apartment operated by Joseph DeStadio in West Haven, from which place the girls are sent * * * to various houses of prostitution throughout Connecticut in order to ply their illicit trade."

Actress Wins Right To Rename Child

Los Angeles, Aug. 21 (AP).—Joan Bennett, blonde film actress, won court permission to change the name of her daughter today, but faces a fight from the child's father to make the victory permanent.

After Supreme Judge Arthur Crum approved changing 8½-year-old Diana Bennett Fox's name to Diana Bennett Markey, Miss Bennett's former husband and father of the child, John Marion Fox, announced he would appeal.

The actress' present husband, Gene Markey, testified "I am very eager to have her take my name."

Miss Bennett contended the 36-year-old Fox, member of a wealthy Seattle family, had paid little attention to Diana and never contributed to her support. She divorced Fox in 1928 and married Markey, father of her other daughter, Melinda Markey, 2½, in 1932.

Six Oil Concern Officers Held In Trust Case

Eight Others Are Expected to Surrender Soon; 23 Firms Indicted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 21.—Six prominent oil company executives were arraigned before a Federal judge today on an indictment charging them with violation of the Sherman antitrust law.

Bail for the six, part of a group of 58 individuals and 23 oil companies and their subsidiaries named in an indictment returned at Madison, Wis., July 28, was fixed at $5,000 each, and they were paroled in the custody of their attorneys until Monday, when bonds are to be filed.

The men were E. W. Sinclair, president of the Sinclair Refining Co.; H. W. Dodge, vice president of the Texas Company; H. E. Brandli, vice president and general manager of the Cities Service Export Oil Co.; Frank R. Coates, director of the Cities Service Co. and vice president of Cities Service Export Oil Co.; Noel Robinson, vice president of the Tidewater Oil Co., and Harry Fueauff, vice president of the Cities Service Export Oil Co., the Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation and the Empire Oil & Refining Co.

The arraignment took place before Judge Samuel Mandelbaum, sitting in the absence of a United States Commissioner.

The indictment charges that between February, 1935, and July, 1936, the defendants and others conspired artifically to raise and fix the prices of tank car gasoline and exacted money from jobbers who, in turn, raised retail prices, the alleged conspiracy being in restraint of trade.

Hallboy Denies Co-ed's Killing, Claims Torture

Says Detective Beat Him and Forced Confession; Alibi Is Offered.

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 21.—Martin Moore, 22-year-old hallboy, swore today he was tortured into confession he killed Helen Clevenger in her Battery Park hotel room at 1 a. m. July 16, and produced witnesses to support his claim he was at a birthday party at the time.

The 6-foot-3 colored man insisted throughout his examination on the witness stand that "a fat man from New York with a piece of rubber hose" forced his original statement that he battered the little blonde's face with the butt of his pistol after a bullet through her chest failed to halt her screams when he entered her room to rob it.

As for his blood-stained gun on which expert witnesses testified they found hair similar to Helen's, Moore claimed he had lent it the fatal night to L. D. Roddy, colored fellow employe.

Moore claimed he was beaten for 20 minutes immediately after his arrest, and that later "that New York man, the fat man," told him his fingerprints had been found on a lampshade.

"He said if I didn't own up to it he'd whip me to death," Moore declared.

Admitting he re-enacted the crime in the girl's room for the benefit of officers and cameramen, Moore said:

"I done it after they whipped me and told me to do it."

records of the company were torn to bits after announcement had been made that the records had been required by the committee.

Pieced Papers Together.

Robert Gates, one of the investigators, testified that he pieced some of the torn papers together in the Philadelphia office of the company and had found this sentence:

"Was talking with some men from Youngstown Sheet & Tube plant and they tell us both men and company are preparing for a shutdown unless men stay away from C. I. O."

The C. I. O. is the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, which is attempting to organize the steel industry.

LaFollette indicated he might start court proceedings against the detective agency officials, as well as proceedings for contempt of the Senate.

The court action here was taken by L. Douglas Rice, of Philadelphia, vice president of the company, seeking to enjoin his own company from producing its records before the committee. He called the investigation "a general inquisition and investigation, and an unlimited fishing expedition."

Pointing out the subpenas calling for the records were so inclusive they called for the production of the whole of the corporation's office, Rice challenged the authority of the committee.

The court ordered the defendants to show cause by next Tuesday why they should not be enjoined from producing their records. In effect, the defendants which include the audit and inspection company, and certain of its officers and subsidiaries, are seeking to enjoin themselves from appearing. This avoids direct action against the Senate committee which would be of disputed validity.

"The power and authority which the resolution attempts to delegate to said sub-committee is illegally and unlawfully vague, capricious indefinite and unlimited and beyond the scope of any lawful inquiry of the Senate of the United States," the petition said.

The resolution referred to is the one adopted by the Senate creating the committee.

The petition also questioned the constitutionality of the investigation.

The Philadelphia suit, also brought by Rice, was similar to the one filed here. According to the United Press, Judge Oliver B. Dickinson indicated he was not inclined to grant a blanket restraining order, but expressed belief there might be some papers the committee had no right to see. He suggested that Rice specify particularly the records he did not wish disclosed.

Communists Back Newspaper Strike

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 21 (AP).—Communists urged support tonight for striking editorial workers on the Post-Intelligencer, while the American Federation of Labor began an investigation of the Seattle Central Labor Council's action in listing the newspaper as "unfair."

The Times published a Communist handbill entitled, "Support the Newspaper Guild," which called the strike a week ago last night in protest over the discharge of two guild members from the paper's staff. The Hearst-owned newspaper has not published since the strike was begun.

"The Communist Party calls upon all people to support the strike called by the American Newspaper Guild by joining the pickets, sending financial support, demanding the disarming of all gunmen and the immediate arrest of Heart's and the Washington Industrial Council's gunmen * * *," the handbill declared.

Salvation Army Couple Retires Here After 41 Years' Service

Brig. and Mrs. John McGee were retired last night from service in the Salvation Army. They have spent seven years here in Washington. Brig. McGee, center, and Mrs. McGee, left, are being bid good-by by Isaac Gans, local civic worker and chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

Every night there were 80 men.

Every night there were 80 men without jobs.

Every night there were 80 men without jobs who must sleep and 80 men who must eat because the unemployed, too, must eat and sleep to live.

Every night they came in a tattered stream of poverty that never stopped because the depression never stopped, either.

And that kept on for seven years—all the time Brig. John McGee and Mrs. McGee have been here. They were officers in the Salvation Army and they ran the Army's Social Service Center at First and F streets northwest. The center would sleep 80 men.

Those years of service ended last night for Brig. and Mrs. McGee. It ended in the Salvation Army Auditorium at 606 E street northwest, where a farewell party was given for them.

They were retired.

Two hundred persons sat in that auditorium. The army's band played hymns. The people sang.

Maj. James Asher, divisional commander, presided over the meeting. He said:

"Life is made up of farewells."

But after all the service of Brigadier and Mrs. McGee didn't end. Not any more than sickness and poverty or life and death. Because, as the others said on the program later, the Brigadier and his wife always will devote their lives to "ministering to the poor and suffering."

Isaac Gans, president of the army's advisory board; Adjutant Gilbert S. Decker, divisional headquarters; Adjutant Hugo Blooming, and Brigadier William H. Range, territorial service secretary, Atlanta, Ga., spoke. All said Washington was sorry to "lose a man like this and a woman like this."

In a week, Brigadier and Mrs. McGee will go to Asbury Park, N. J., to live. They too spoke. Their voices quivered as they said they hated to leave.

This was not the first time Brigadier McGee and his wife had seen poverty or helped the poor, because they were not retired last night from 7 years of service. They were retired after 41 years—in all parts of this country—but those 7 years here were the hardest.

Some of the 80 men were there last night. They sat straight in thir chairs, and look straight ahead, because emotion touched them. One of them cried. He was jobless. He found a home at the center.

The farewell party closed with a hymn: "'Till We Meet Again."

'Mind' Is Subject Of Science Church

"Mind" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Psalms 147:5: "Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is perfect in knowledge." (Job 37:16).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The starting point of divine Science is that God, Spirit, is All-in-all, and that there is no other might nor Mind—that God is Love, and therefore He is divine Principle."

Salvation Army's Services Listed

Salvation Army services tomorrow morning will be conducted at the following points with the following officers in charge:

Jackson Martin, who conducts both services, at Corps, No. 4, 1075 Jefferson street northwest, and Capt. and Mrs. Satterfield, who conduct both services at Corps No. 5, 715 I street northeast.

On the Air Today

During the vacation absence of John Heiney, Post Radio Editor, his column will be conducted by various Washington radio personalities. Today's guest columnist is Bud Ward, master of ceremonies of the National Children's Frolic Program, WRC.

For me to be called upon to furnish material for the column of a crack news gatherer such as John Heiney, presents a perfect picture of a square peg in a round hole. Therefore, I am between a rock and a hard place. I am like the unfortunate man who had both legs cut off short. I am completely stumped. I am as out of place as a one-armed man at an old-fashion candy pulling. However, if I can manage to muster the sympathies of the dear public, I am all set. Well, anyway, I'll take this old pen in hand and makes a stab at it.

Instead of speaking of radio broadcasting in general, I have been asked to confine my remarks to the children's part in radio.

Now, I must have a peg on which to hang a few thoughts, so I hope I shall be forgvien for being personal and using my own show, The National Children's Frolic, as an example. This program, however, with its long and successful run and with the training which it affords the children of the vicinity, without cost to them or their parents, is a perfect example of what can be done for and by the children. Every Saturday since March, 1934, a number of children have been given the opportunity of broadcasting. Some have taken the opportunity of radio more seriously and have experienced greater accomplishments. Of course it is a fact that some have the advantage in that they are blessed in having someone in the home who can play the piano and help them in their acts. For example; the recently discovered child artist, Joan Felt, who is now a movie star in Hollywood, has a mother who is a very talented pianist and who has been able to help her child with her singing and dancing. Mrs. Felt and her famous daughter had their first introduction to the world on the National Children's Frolic. Time and space will not permit the recording of hundreds of others of our children who have become excellent young artists. Several others are in Hollywood at this time. Just what break they will get with the producers, if any, only time will tell. Others have been auditioned by major network artists in New York and some have been presented on Nation-wide broadcasts.

By the foregoing statements, some may get the idea that it is our purpose to herd together all of the young artists of the city and ship them away to Hollywood or New York as fast as they become locally popular. This is not our motive. On the other hand it affords us just as much pleasure to coach a child on a hymn or a chant and to recommend to the child a choir singer's career, as to present one with a letter of recommendation to the producers of Hollywood or New York. It is not our purpose to choose a vocation for anyone's child.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the training of children. We all know that if we are to have great soldiers, sailors, athletes, bankers, merchants and other business and professional people, they must be trained. The same holds true in the field of fine arts. If we are to have worthwhile radio, stage and concert entertainers for the future, we must train them while they are young. Some few still hold to the antiquated idea that "children should be seen and not heard," but this erroneous idea is easily offset by the age-old epigram, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

At this point I shall try to answer a few questions which are most frequently propounded to me: Q. Where do you get all these children and how can you depend on them.—A. Children come because they are anxious for the opportunity of broadcasting and because their parents, in most cases, are interested in this phase of the education of their children. Children, as a rule, are just as dependable, as they have faith in and respect for their leaders. Q. Doesn't it take lots of patience to fool with kids all the time? —A. Yes. And it takes lots of patience to grow a beautiful flower, but when one sees the finished product in either case, he feels that his time has been well spent. Q. How many children have you auditioned and how many have been used?—A. About 1,000 have been auditioned to date and the majority of these have been used on the air.

In closing, probably I have space to mention a few of the many humorous and queer things which happen with the children, on and off the air. Once I introduced a boy and told our listeners that he would sing "Home on the Range," the favorite song of the President. A little girl had just finished singing "The Last Round-Up." The boy, having his mind on what the girl had just finished singing, approached the mike and began, "I'm Headin' for the Last——" I interrupted and said, "No, son; we're not headin' any place. We're home on the range. Don't you remember?" The crowd roared. His face turned red, but he took it good-naturedly and put his song over nicely.

Another time I had introduced a boy who is an artist on playing his guitar and singing hill-billy songs. I turned to him and asked, "What are you going to sing?" He said, "Goin' Down the Road Feelin' Bad." He sat down carelessly on the edge of a folding chair and as he said "Goin' Down——" one of the mischievous boys slipped the chair from under the singer and he went down flat, but being able to play his guitar behind him, in front or over his head, he didn't miss a stroke. The crowd was tickled and the boy was vexed, but he carried his number through.

One queer "off the air" incident and I'm through. One afternoon we were rehearsing a little girl who has a charming, high soprano voice, when in at the window flew a homing pigeon. The title of the song which the child was singing is, "A Brown Bird Singing." The pigeon perched upon the music rack of the piano and very complacently began to look the situation over. Soon all hands were trying to catch him, whereupon the homer flew to the ledge of the highest window in the studio. After a time, the child was asked to sing again and see if the pigeon would come down. He did come down. I then called the city editor of The Post and soon a photographer was in the studio with his camera. The little girl stood before the mike and again began to sing some very high notes. The pigeon perched atop the mike and looked down into the child's face while she continued to sing. The Post photographer went into ecstacies . . . click, click went his camera . . . The story and picture were in the next morning's Post. Click . . . click . . . goes this typewriter, and I am through . . . Knock-knock . . . come the knocks from the readers . . . and John Heiney will have a lot of explaining to do.

BUD WARD.

Simone Simon Makes Debut in Appealing Play

French Ingenue Reveals Charm at Capitol; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"GIRLS' DORMITORY." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the play "Commencement," by Ladislaus Fodor, adapted to the screen by Gene Markey, costarring Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton and introducing Simone Simon, supported by Constance Collier, J. Edward Bromberg, John Qualen, Dixie Dunbar, Frank Reicher, George Hassell, Christian Rub and Rita Gould. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Here is a picture that falls definitely into the category of "Maedchen in Uniform" and, to a slightly lesser degree, "The Children's Hour," or, as it was known to the screen, "These Three."

BELL.

While in structure it adheres to the triangular form, "Girls' Dormitory" is not at all the usual domestic "triangle drama." It is a study in adolescent infatuation, of the power of youthful impetuosity and ardor to defeat patient and unostentatious adult devotion; a subject of psychological and mental, as well as romantic, conflict that finds its chief source of expression in the ingenuous figure of a young girl about to graduate from a strictly regimented seminary conducted in the high Alps by Dr. Stefan Dominik.

A few days before her graduation, Marie Claudel is accused of having composed an impassioned love letter which seems to implicate her in a clandestine affair with an unknown man. The matter is brought before the faculty and magnified into an importance not justified by the circumstances. To Prof. Anna Mathe, Marie confides that she wrote the letter merely as an outlet for her pent-up adoration of Dr. Dominik, director of the school. It has always been tacitly believed that an "understanding" has existed that some time Anna and Stefan would wed. Upon this premise is founded the tale of juvenile triumph that forms the crux of the film play.

Played With Repression.

The familar theme has been accorded a repressed and intelligent treatment that renders it wholly innocuous although not without its elements of controversy. There will always be a school of thought that abhors the mating of young girlhood with middle age, but in the present instance the chief item of contention will be found to rest in the virtual desertion of the faithful Anna on the part of the Herr Doktor in favor of her youthful rival. It is a point that may only be resolved satisfactorily by the individual spectator in his own mind, according to his personal point of view and inclination, but it adds a distinct fillip to the interest of a plot otherwise trite.

"Girls' Dormitory" is played with utmost restraint by every member of a cast of unusually judicious selection. In fact, the prime defect in yesterday afternoon's projection of the picture seemed to me to be that the sound track was toned down to a degree that made many of the important speeches so subdued as to be almost unintelligible to patrons sitting even as close to the screen as the middle of the house.

Simone Simon Is Unique.

Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton play with quiet effectiveness in the roles of Dr. Dominik and Prof. Anna, the members of the faculty most sympathetic toward Marie in her self-imposed crisis, and Constance Collier, in a role a little more on the comic side than she is accustomed to play, and J. Edward Bromberg, are the rigid disciplinarians who seek to make a "horrible example" of the girl who is only guilty of being in love. Frank Reicher and George Hassell, lend comic touches to two minor characters and John Qualen and Christian Rub appear in less subtle menial roles.

Primary interest, of course, centers in the widely heralded American screen debut of Simone Simon in the role of Marie. There is no one before the American public quite comparable to Mlle. Simon. She is a diminutive young woman with a tip-tilted nose, sparkling eyes and an elfin quality of naivete that is perfectly set off by the faintest suggestion of French accent. She is obviously "played up" by her associates in the cast—especially Mr. Marshall and Miss Chatterton—but, without apparent exertion of any superlative endowments, contrives on her own account to imbue her performance with a breathlessness and impetuous ardor that assuredly "get across" to her audience. Emphatically Mlle. Simon is a young lady who will bear watching.

In settings, photography and direction, "Girls' Dormitory" is a fine example of the cinema's most advanced artistry.

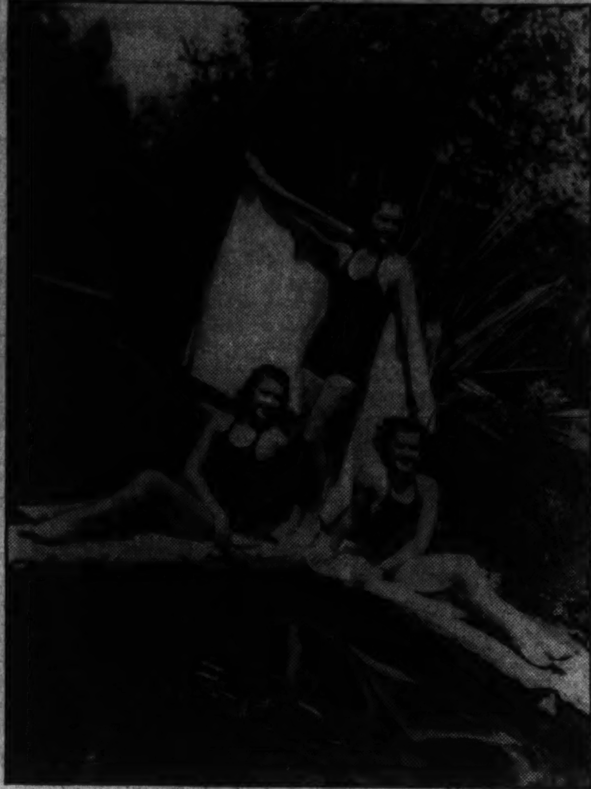
Old Favorite on Stage.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week is made up of familiar ingredients. Ben Blue returns to the headline spot with the same act he presented here on his last visit—a comic combination of his "taxi dance" adventure, Russian dancing and the "dying swan." Sybil Bowan, one of the best of the feminine impressionists, also scores her usual hit with her amusing caricatures of Beatrice Lillie, Gloria Swanson, the passe movie star and—with profuse apologies—the First Lady.

The specialties are inaugurated by Roye and Maye, dancers, include the Five Maxellos, marvelous tumblers and upside-down gynasts and are embellished by the graceful routines of the Elida Ballet, who open and close the bill.

Pete Smith's "Harnessed Rhythm," devoted to the trotting races; a Buster West-Tom Patricola comedy, "Fresh From the Fleet," the Fox Movietone News, with new views of the Olympics, and Prof. Lampkin's music augment a feature that may be relied upon to arouse wide discussion.

Cloistered Alpine Seminary Girls!



These secluded and strictly guarded young women are three of many youthful beauties encountered during the engaging action of "Girls' Dormitory," chief screen feature for the new week at Loew's Capitol Theater. They are, left to right, Shirley Deane, Lynne Berkeley and Dixie Dunbar. One rather expects Miss Dunbar to break into her dance at any moment—but she never does. The film play, as a matter of fact, is lively enough as it is.

Palace

"TO MARY—WITH LOVE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Richard Sherman, with screen play by Mr. Sherman and Howard Ellis Smith, starring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, supported by Ian Hunter, Claire Trevor, Jean Dixon, Paul Hurst, Franklin Pangborn, Tyler Brooke, Florence Lake, Ruth Clifford, Pat Somerset and Arthur Aylesworth. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Dividing highlights of contemporary history and a story of love, romance and silent adoration, the whole covering the decade from 1925, "To Mary—With Love" continues to fascinate the public, not only by its presentation of an interesting story but also by the sundry arguments engendered by certain elements of the yarn.

Hamlet had his problem of "to be or not to be," so Mary has her problem, to divorce or not to divorce. In her decision to stick lies the cue for considerable discussion, making "post mortems" in some degree of greater interest than the picture itself.

The story presents a sum total of vivid entertainment to which Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy add their considerable talents to fine advantage.

In the supporting cast, headed by Ian Hunter—who nearly steals the show from the stars—a group of capable actors have been gathered together.

The supplementary attractions are "Master Will Shakespeare," a commentary on the use of the Bard of Avon, with a suggestion of the forthcoming "Romeo and Juliet;" "Mickey's Rival," a color cartoon of merit, and the Metrotone News.

Metropolitan

"THE GREEN PASTURES." Warner Brothers picturization of the play by Marc Connelly based on Roark Bradford's Southern sketches, "Ol' Man Adam and His Chillun," featuring Rex Ingram, supported by Oscar Polk, Eddie Anderson, Frank Wilson, George Reed, Abraham Gleaves, Myrtle Anderson, Al Stokes, Edna M. Harris, James Fuller and an all-Negro cast. Vocal accompaniment by the Hall Johnson Choir. Directed by Marc Connelly and William Keighley. Reviewed (return engagement, second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Simple theology simply told is the basis of "The Green Pastures," one of the great pictures of all time and, perhaps, the greatest picture of its type ever made.

In fact, one cannot easily bring to mind any picture which embraces the same scope and purpose as this forthright narrative of the Divinity and mankind and the vicissitudes of both.

With the unvarnished plainness of the Louisiana Negro and his very real belief in God and Heaven and the rewards of righteousness, "The Green Pastures" relates not so much a story—although it is the story of the Old Testament—as the picturization of a religion as real and tangible as everyday life.

Rex Ingram, as De Lawd, supported by an exceptional all-Negro cast, carries the fable through its several episodes with ever-increasing conviction.

Augmenting the program—which really needs no supplementary subjects—are a release of the Popular Science series; a Screen Song, "The Hills of Old Wyoming," and the combined Paramount and Universal newsreels.

RKO-Keith's

"MARY OF SCOTLAND." RKO-Radio picturization of the play by Maxwell Anderson, adapted to the screen by Dudley Nichols, starring Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March, supported by Florence Eldridge, Ian Keith, Moroni Olson, Ralph Forbes, David Torrence, Robert Barrat, Douglas Walton and Frieda Inescort. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed third week by Dorothea Lewis.

The bagpipes continue their skirling yet another week and Hardie Meakin sees that "five weeks' run" prophesy of his, pass the half-way mark.

"Mary of Scotland" is a handsome and constantly interesting picture. At times, it is a little too handsome and its very capable people a bit too conscious that they are taking part in a history (no matter how that history has changed in the telling), and at these times it is heavy and slow.

But shortly, the fiery Bothwell breaks in with his disarmingly brusque and natural manner—history be damned, he's still living his life, not readying it for text books. Or Mary stands on a high tower and talks like a poetic schoolgirl of her tragic life. Or Rizzio sings of his native Italy. And then the whole play comes to splendid theatrical life.

Katharine Hepburn is no Helen Hayes, but her performance for the most part is very right, and now and again exceptionally moving. Fredric March's Bothwell lends vigor, strength and color to the whole production. Florence Eldridge is a brilliant, bitter, cold Elizabeth; John Carradine a splendid, sensitive Rizzio. A large and distinguished cast completes the roster of the play. Our own deepest regret is that RKO did not dare, or care, to use the Anderson lines, for their beauty was far greater than that of lavish setting or rich costume. Now the movie audience must wait for "Winterset" for Anderson's "language."

Time also continues to march on this week, presenting three episodes, of which by far the most vivid and important is the pitiful story of the Cotton Sharecroppers of the South, a story too little known to Americans outside of the affected area. There is also the Pathe Newsreel.

Columbia

"POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman and Harry Tugend, suggested by the stories of Eleanor Gates and Ralph Spence, starring Shirley Temple, supported by Michael Whalen, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley, Alice Faye and Claude Gillingwater. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Friday afternoon, repeat engagement, by Sally Stroud.

Shirley Temple is a poor little rich girl who finds the road to childish adventure through living out the life of her favorite storybook character. Surrounded by all the appurtenances of wealth, she longed for the normal life of an ordinary youngster. Through sundry happenings she found the companions who symbolized the sort of carefree existence she wished for.

An outline of the plot would destroy your appreciation of the story development, so there will be none. It is sufficient to say you will not be disappointed in the little star. She sings, dances and wise-cracks in a thoroughly natural and childlike manner and furthers her campaign to win the hearts of even the most jaundiced detester of youthful stars. She appears to improve in technique, possibly because she is blessed with good dialogue which seems amusing and unstudied.

A Robert Edmond Jones colormusical is brief and lovely; two youngsters tap dance through a comedy; Don Baker, organist, presents Handel's "Largo," Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and "Danny Boy;" the newsreel features rare shots of the Olympics, including the 400-meter run and Helen Stevens' relay dash.

U. S. Dentist Deported; Film Offended Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 21 (AP).—Dr. Harry Bernard Wright, Philadelphia dentist and amateur photographer, was forced to leave Mexico under threat of deportation yesterday because of government objections to a travelogus he made while in this country two years ago.

An order, barring him from Mexico, was issued on July 19, 1935, after the Mexicon consul in New York had reported the film derogatory to Mexico. He re-entered the country at Port Tapachula and came to Mexico City, continuing to Acapulco, where this afternoon he prepared to board a southbound liner. Authorities here said he had telegraphed the Mexican government his apologies and assurances he never had intended to offend Mexico.

Mrs. Boeckel to Attend World Peace Congress

Twenty American delegates, including Mrs. Florence Brewer Boeckel, of Washington, education director of the National Council for Prevention of War, will sail from New York today to atend a world peace congress to be held in Brussels September 3-6.

More than 1,000 delegates, representing 30 countries, will participate in the congress. Pierre Cot, former air minister and member of the present cabinet of France, launched the plan, and Viscount Cecil, who conducted the British peace ballot, will preside.

Rhythm Reigns On New Bill at Earle Theater

Bing Crosby Hit on Screen and Phil Spitalny Is Smash on Stage.

"RHYTHM ON THE RANGE." Paramount picturization of a story by Melvin J. Houser, adapted to the screen by Walter de Leon, Francis Martin, John C. Moffitt and Sidney Salkow, starring Bing Crosby, With Frances Farmer, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Samuel S. Hinds, Warren Hymer, Louise Webster Gleason, George E. Stone and Martha Sleeper. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Between "Rhythm On the Range" an rhythm on the stage the Earle Theater is surely rhythm-conditioned this week. And a nice job it is between Bing Crosby's warbling and the surprising harmonies of Maestro Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" orchestra.

Bing Crosby is the head and front of "Rhythm On the Range," but he has acquired a perfect side-kick and foil in Bob Burns, the fellow with the "bazooka," who made such a hit in the Earle stage show a few months ago. Burns would appear to be right on his way up the Hollywood grade. He is so good that he has almost outgrown his "bazooka."

The yarn owes its tangling to a bull named "Cuddles," a large and loveable animal about half the size of a summer cottage. If "Cuddles" hadn't cost too much, Jeff Larrabee (Bing) and Frances Farmer would never have enjoyed an unchaperoned freight-car excursion. (Unless you want to count "Cuddles" as the chaperon.)

Begins With Rodeo.

Starting with the rodeo in Madison Square Garden, the story shifts its locale West via freight car and winds up somewhere in Arizona. The general idea is that heiress Frances Farmer, by palming herself off on Jeff Larrabee as a wandering female hobo, entangles that artless cowboy's affections. Then comes the big let-down when he finds out about her father's millions and figures that he has been played for a bit of a sap. The let-down is followed, of course, by a build-up to that proper happy ending.

But this is the mere framework of a genuinely crackerjack amusement structure, decorated with the finest Crosby songs, some ace thrills and loads of "horsing around"—both in the equine sense and otherwise.

"Empty Saddles" is the big Crosby hit song, plenty haunting both in words and melody. But lots of us will enjoy even more the highly chile-peppered version of "I'm an Old Cowhand From the Rio Grande." "I Can't Escape You" is attractive fooling, but to this critic the big melody sensation of the picture was the spectacle of Bing Crosby singing "Cuddles" to sleep and watching that noble animule actually settle down to slumber.

Frances Farmer does nicely enough as Bing's romantic interest. But Martha Raye, the funny girl, will razz your nerves terrifically until you begin to get used to her and decide that she really is funny as the dickens! And how Miss Raye can "swing" after a couple of shots of vodka! (We forgot to say that the show includes a Russian cowboy who makes his own vodka.) Another thing we forgot to say is that you will want to see at least twice the spectacle of "Cuddles" chasing Frances Farmer with murderous intent, but not quite catching her. Darn it!

Spitalny at Top of Form.

Phil Spitalny's astonishing girl orchestra seems to get better all the time. Apparently assured that the girls are well seasoned and not to be spoiled by individual applause, Mr. Spitalny now introduces them by name which is very nine and enlightening. This time he has a new dancer, Dale Winthrop, a real artist in taps.

Maxine, featured Spitalny singer, has a smoothly charming voice and delivery. But audience appreciation (and this critic's) went just as much to the Three Little Words in their trick version of "There Is a Tavern in the Town" and their "Knock, Knock" encore, in which Phil himself went in for some knock-knocking.

The Spitalny version of the "Bolero" was handsome and stirring. The same goes for the rest of the numbers, but we must qualify this by remarking that the answer is the Spitalny arrangements.

The current Earle newsreel shows the audience very sport-minded, giving liberal applause to both Schmeling and Champion Braddock, also to Eleanor Holm Jarrett, but never a paddy-pat for the Olympic winners.

Chapter XXIII.

Under Suspicion.

Bridget's eyes narrowed slightly. "You're being absurd, Eden. Why shouldn't I like a man who has been my dear friend for years?"

"Because I don't believe he is your friend. I don't believe he is a friend to any one but himself."

Bridget fastened the gold cord of her negligee and pushed back the beautifully sculptured mass of her hair.

"Don't be fantastic. And don't copy Gran's elocutionary manner. I don't like being preached at when I'm on the point of exhaustion. Another thing, Eden—this young reporter. This Garnett, or whatever his name is—it appears to me that you are seeing a great deal of him. And you are letting him involve you in unpleasant things. What do you know about him?"

"He's on a newspaper—he's a gentleman, mother. Gran likes him."

"Gran likes everything male that walks the earth. She has a fixation on boys of any age. That's no recommendation."

"He's——you'd like him if you knew him, mother." Eden did not say what had quivered on her tongue. She did not say, "He's in love with me," but she had a sinking certainty that the burning spots in her cheeks were speaking aloud this secret. But her mother's mind was far away. Not until Eden asked, "Why did you ask that, mother?" did Bridget look around.

Then she said, turning her eyes back to the mirror, "Owen Field came to see me today."

Eden tapped her foot. "Mother—I'm not in love with Owen Field."

"So he told me."

"He's splendid—wonderful to me. I like him a lot. But—you can't make yourself love some one, mother."

Bridget did things absently with her nail scissors.

Job in Doubt.

"Field," she said, "seems to be disturbed very little by your reluctance. Apparently he is confident you'll change. He comes from a fine old family, Eden. He has a brilliant future undoubtedly. But that's not what I was going to speak about. Owen Field talked to me about this young Garnett. He said that Garnett claimed to be a newspaper photographer—but have you ever seen him taking any pictures, Eden?"

Eden was startled. "Why no—but he carries a camera—works for the Tribune."

"You know that he works for the Tribune?"

"Mother, of course I know. I—called there today." And the little troubling flame crept into her cheeks.

"Owen Field," Bridget went on deliberately, "seems to think it rather odd that this young Garnett knows so many underworld characters. He said, he was going to talk to Martin Burke about it."

"Jack Garnett has gone to talk to Mr. Burke himself." Eden's tone was faintly sharp. "Mother—it isn't like you to be suspicious. I think it's cheap. Jack Garnett is fine—and gentle—and square——"

"You talk," her mother abruptly, "as though you were in love with the man!"

A queer breathlessness shook Eden Faraday from head to foot.

"I—think I am!" she said.

* * * *

The big black roadster with the five bugle horns on the side and expensive radio blaring on the dashboard, moved sleekly through the afternoon traffic.

Coburn Faraday sat stiff with misery, in the right hand seat, his chin in his collar, speaking only now and then in gruff monosyllables.

At the wheel Raquel was brightly cheerful, her brows newly plucked and dyed, her lips shaped to an alluring bow, a knot of violets on the gray fur of her new spring coat.

"I don't know why you are so poisonous today," she said. "I've certainly done everything I could to make things easy and pleasant. I borrowed this car from Kalaban and that wasn't easy to do. And picking $50 out of my mother was no easy job, either. I've got the license and the money for the minister—I've even go' my own bouquet—and what do you say to that? You could be a little sweet, couldn't you? And why do you keep saying you've got to go to the La Salle street station.

"I want to telephone," grumped Coburn.

"They've got public telephones on every corner. What are you trying to do, darling? Run out on me?"

"Exactly," Coburn was a little savage, "what I'm trying to do! I've told you that I can't be married—that I haven't any money or any job."

"And I've told you a thousand times that you don't need any money or any job, dear boy. You've said that you love me—well, that's enough. We won't even tell people that we're married unless you want to. I had to tell mother, of course—I couldn't have got the money without some explanation. You should know how mothers are—you've got one."

The Proposal.

"You," Coburn was surly, "had no business coming into that gym after me. You put me in a rotten position. I should have slapped you down but I couldn't very well do it with the track coach and those other fellows around. Now let me out of here. I've got things I want to do."

"Presently, darling — presently. You'll thank me later. I'm going to make you rich and famous. I'll be a grand wife."

"I don't want a grand wife—or any wife."

"Listen to the crossy patch! You're fooling, of course. I know the world better than you do. I know the ropes in this town. You'll never get anywhere carrying a lot of deals around."

The car halted at a red light and Coburn cast speculative eyes on the door handle, but Raquel's hard, dry-lipped look warned him off.

"Don't try to lam out on me, boy. All bridegrooms are nervous. Don't you read the funny papers? I don't want to have to go to your mother—I'd much rather keep this our own precious secret, but of course if I have to——" She felt the threat hanging sweetly in air. "We'll go to Monk's place and get some beer," she said presently. "That will steady your nerves. It's only 2 o'clock. I told mother we'd be back at 6. We'll stop somewhere about 5 and be married."

"Can't you get through your head that I don't want to be married now? Today—or any other day? You're wasting time—and you don't want me anyway. I'd never make a smart, dirty politician like Kalaban. I wouldn't take cuts from mobsters and pull crooked deals with cops."

"You're excited, lambie; mother knows best." She was as stonily unimpressed as the lamp posts they passed.

At Monk's place Coburn sat sunk in moody silence while Raquel ate the food a sleepy waiter brought.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Reviewing Stand.

Atlantic City, Aug. 21.

On the Richman-Dick Merrill flight to London and return, the singer will spend a minimum of minutes at the controls . . . When a plane is traveling 250 miles an hour, a pilot has to be only a little off his course to fly out of one State into another, or even fly from one ocean to another . . . So Pilot Merrill, greatest of the veteran transport fliers, will gently, but firmly, dissuade his companion from the task . . . Merrill, short, wiry Louisiana product, is a compact bundle of flying skill and great courage . . . Airmen say that he is a natural "eagle" type, in deference to his absolute ease and certainly in the air . . . Eddie Rickenbacker raves over him . . . In the last few years he's flown Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of The Washington Post publisher; Wall Streeter Ben Smith, Grant Rice, Canadian Provincial Premier Hepburn, Sophie Tucker, Bill and Amy Mollison, Amelia Earhart and a host of other celebs . . . Merrill's consuming ambition has been to fly the ocean both ways, back and forth . . . If the plane is as good as its pilot, it will be accomplished . . . And Broadway, irreverent, whispers: "Godspeed."

IRVING BERLIN.

* * * *

Irving Berlin is homebound on the Ile de France . . . The Stem will be glad to see him again, because in the last year, an amazing change has occurred in him . . . He was always a nice guy, but his shyness precluded a large circle of friends . . . In the past twelfth-month, Berlin has shaken off that shyness.

* * * *

His entrnce into Dinty Moore's now is the signal for spontaneous table greetings . . . At a big benefit the writer staged not long ago, Berlin arrived early . . . Minor celebs were screaming to get on the stage and do their act . . . "I'm in no hurry, Ed," said Berlin . . . He was like a kid with a new toy when the big show started, going from one performer to another and soliciting autographs for his youngsters . . . He stayed at the theater for a full three hours, and when it was all over, he was positively regretful . . . "I never knew these things were so much fun," he commented . . . It all goes back to this column's reiteration that the bigger they are, the nicer they are . . . Only the smallies are annoying and presumptuous.

Knock, knock.
Who's there?
Pop.
Pop who?
Holy smokes, don't you know your old man?

* * * *

Lady Luck seems to have deserted Jim Braddock, after pinning high honors on him . . . Schmeling's knockout of Joe Louis was the first indication that the old girl has chilled Jimmy because against Louis, Braddock would have made a lot of money . . . Now the doctors say that the world's heavyweight champion can't box until next summer, and say that it is arthritis . . . Lady Luck, who knows more than doctors, must have smirked at the medical diagnosis, for it is this capricious wench who is kicking our Jimmy around.

Recasting.

The fans continue to play at the game of being producers.

Neal Conway writes that he could change the title of "To Mary — With Love" and recast it. He would call it, "To Jerry —With Love," and instead of having two men, Warner Baxter and Ian Hunter, in love with the same girl, Myrna Loy, he would have two girls, Miss Loy and Jean Harlow, in love with the same man, Clark Gable. Yes, Neal, and then we could reissue the flicker and send it out again as "Wife vs. Secretary."

JEAN HARLOW.

"You wanted me to cast pictures," writes Paul Brown; "well, here are my suggestions. I believe Wallace Beery could have played Charles Laughton's part as Capt. Bligh in 'Mutiny on the Bounty' like nobody's business. And I would like to see Jean Harlow instead of Carole Lombard in 'The Princess Comes Across.' In fact, I'd like to see Miss Harlow in all of Miss Lombard's roles."

A piece of recasting that the studios beat the fans to was in the flicker, "His Brother's Wife." This picture was originally scheduled to co-star Clark Gable and Jean Harlow. But Metro teamed their rising star, Robert Taylor, with his gal friend, Barbara Stanwyck, and it is doing great business at the box office.

The fans have been writing in and casting Mary Astor for roles in practically every picture. Incidentally, Mary Astor has a new romance, and his name is Michael Bartlett. But as one wag said: "She hasn't the diary anymore."

Edward Arnold, having whiskers put on his face so it will appear he needs a shave for a scene in the flicker, "Come and Get It." . . . The makeup man first rubs a paste over Arnold's face and provides the outline for the shape of the beard. Then the makeup man takes a piece of cheesecloth on which are a number of loose hairs, and pats Arnold's face. The loose hairs stick to the portion which has paste and soon Arnold needs a shave.

Smart Alec.

The practice of showing a few cards to the declarer, to convince him that further striving would be futile, and thus to speed up the play, is a highly dangerous one, unless the good Samaritan is so expert that he can be sure of his ground. I know one defender who will never again become impatient when the declarer goes into a huddle! Merely because he was in a hurry to get to the next deal, West practically fulfilled the declarer's grand-slam contract for him.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 hearts	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	5 hearts	Pass
7 hearts (final contract)

North and South were not using the new asking bids and, as a result, reached a contract more optimistic than sound. A small slam, which would not have depended upon any finesse, was the proper place to stop.

West opened the eight of hearts rather than jeopardize an honor in the black suits or a possible diamond honor in his partner's hand. Declarer won and drew the outstanding trump. It was obvious that there were several ways to play the hand for thirteen tricks: One to take the spade finesse; two, to take the club finesse, and a third which will be revealed shortly. Not quite sure in his own mind what he meant to do, declarer tentatively led the queen of diamonds, overtook with dummy's king, and played the queen of spades. When East followed with the deuce, the declarer realized he would have to make up his mind then and there.

While he was thinking over the various possibilities West started to fidget and said, "Come on, take your licking. I've got the king," at the same time flashing that card so that declarer could see he was not spoofing. Declarer dryly said, "Thanks, I guess I'd better take the other finesse," whereupon the smart Alec West, not satisfied with the harm he had already done his side, sneered, "O, that won't work either," and gave declarer a peep at the club king as well. That was all the declarer wanted to know! He chortled gleefully and said, "Thanks a lot. Now you'll see both of those kings pickled."

The ace of spades took the trick and declarer rattled off every heart, discarding a spade and a club from dummy. He then entered dummy with a diamond and ran off that suit until only two cards remained in each hand. Dummy's were the jack of spades and the ten of clubs; East's cards were, of course, immaterial; declarer held only the ace and queen of clubs, and West, for all the good they did him, could have thrown his cards in the fire. With only two cards left, he was in the difficult position of having to hold the king of spades and the guarded king of clubs. Declarer, busying himself entering up the grand slam, murmured, "I guess you never heard of a Vienna coup." All West could think of to say to his foaming partner was, "I ought to be kicked in the shins." "You certainly should!" said East grimly, and proceeded to do it!

Discriminating Criticism.

Gov. Landon's campaign strategy was clearly foreshadowed by his acceptance speech. Without pretending that everything the New Deal has done is sinister and destructive, he centered his criticism on some of its most conspicuous mistakes. And with no show of malice or vindictiveness, he briefly outlined his own views as to changes that should be made.

On his first campaign tour to the East that even-tempered demeanor is being maintained. Gov. Landon seems to have no interest in making wild political charges that will appeal only to the emotions of his audiences. His careful discrimination is not typical of campaign politics, but there are indications that it is making a favorable impression on the electorate.

In raising the so-called good government issue, Mr. Landon struck the New Deal in one of its most vulnerable spots. Simultaneous with his charge of sloppy legislation and careless administrative practices come reports of double payments to Resettlement Administration employes, amounting to $181,000. Mistakes of this sort are not surprising in view of the haste with which vast organizations were assembled without specific authorization from Congress or careful advance planning on the part of the President.

The really astonishing aspect of this case is the fact that Government employes would attempt to take advantage of the error by keeping the extra pay checks. Did they suppose that this unearned compensation was a bonus handed out in keeping with the Administration's lavish spending program? Or does the incident represent a lowering of personnel standards as an outgrowth of the spoils system? In either event it becomes a perfect example of the type of administration which should be avoided.

Gov. Landon has done well to emphasize the responsibility of Congress and the electorate for wasteful and inefficient public administration. If citizens fail to take an active interest in the real problems of government, Congress is likely to be overrun by opportunists. And when that happens, the enactment of must legislation without adequate debate or analysis is almost a certain consequence. It is not necessary to be either conservative or liberal to appreciate the soundness of Gov. Landon's appeal for more responsible legislative and administrative procedure.

Training Cruises.

What have the Japanese naval officers and cadets derived from their visit to Washington? To begin with, they have been seeing the sights. They inspected the Capitol, the Library, the Supreme Court Building, the Lincoln Memorial and most of the other points of interest in the city. In addition, they met representatives of the Government and heard words of sincere welcome. In courteous response, they laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. But there was more.

They came to know, in some measure, those people of Washington who represent virtually every section of the country. On the streets, in hotels, at the entertainments in their honor, they had opportunities to observe Americans and their ways. Perhaps after they have returned to Japan, and the next spy scare or transpacific airplane rumor develops, this experience will be remembered, enabling them to achieve a steadying dispassion more difficult for their untraveled fellows.

And insofar as this may be the result of their visit, both here and in other cities, the training cruise recommends itself as an important part of naval routine. Japan, of course, has no monopoly on the practice. British, German and Argentine training ships called recently at nearby Baltimore and warships bearing American cadets are even now making their annual visit to European waters. But the thought occurs that such cruises might well be more widely ordered by all nations.

Our own Navy, for instance, has been conducting regular fleet maneuvers south of the Aleutians and without a doubt these have yielded valuable knowledge. But naval maneuvers, however necessary, inevitably stir a certain resentment among those who feel themselves the target of such operations. More goodwill would doubtless result if some part of the vast expenditures that support these maneuvers were diverted to enlarge the number of young officers and cadets carried on world cruises, meeting and learning to understand better each nation's neighbors in this closely integrated world.

A Strange View Of Liberalism.

In accepting the support of the People's Party, President Roosevelt wrote to Louis Waldman, head of this right wing Socialist group, indorsing his conception of the campaign as a contest between the forces of social progress and reaction. "That, to my mind," he says, "states clearly and succinctly the paramount issue this year, an issue around which true liberals and true progressives can find unity in the struggle for the preservation of fundamental human rights and the promotion of human happiness through security for the individual."

It is impossible to believe that there is a hidden unity of purpose binding together Jeffersonian Democrats who cling to their old party allegiance and Socialists who have declared themselves in favor of the New Deal. It is quite certain, too, that many of the businessmen and bankers who support the Roosevelt candidacy would define the forces of social progress in terms very different from those employed by labor leaders, who are aligned alongside them. Yet the President has no hesitation in bringing these heterogeneous elements under the all-embracing category of "true liberals and true progressives," although the only characteristic they have in common is their advocacy of his re-election.

On numerous occasions President Roosevelt has implied that all who are not for him are hopeless reactionaries, friends of special privilege, or greedy seekers after personal aggrandizement. He seems to forget that liberalism is a state of mind, a political philosophy, not an indorsement of a particular candidate for office or espousal of a particular program of action. Liberals may and do disagree violently among themselves as to the merits of policies designed to promote human happiness and further individual security. Constructive criticism of New Deal policies cannot, therefore, be tossed aside as the subversive utterances of enemies of mankind.

Many of the objectives of the NRA, for example, were admirable in their professed intention to raise wages, lower working hours and reduce unemployment. But this does not mean that the warm-hearted visionary, who thinks an economic Utopia possible because he would have it so, is a true friend of the working man. Rather that designation goes to the intelligent critic who points out the weakness of such schemes. Similarly, the citizen who denounces governmental extravagance and calls for economies is not nearly so likely to jeopardize our social progress as the spendthrift idealist who would plunge the country into bankruptcy and bring the entire structure of reform toppling about our heads.

The great majority of Americans are undoubtedly "liberals" under President Roosevelt's flattering and comprehensive definition of that term, but liberalism in that broad sense does not commit a man to a particular candidate or a particular program of action.

Intelligent discussion of basic issues, which is imperatively needed during the present campaign, is seriously hampered when a candidate resorts to calling the opposition unflattering names and casting aspersions upon the motives of honest critics.

Hippodrome Justice.

A proposal to curb newspaper and radio "hippodroming" of criminal trials will be laid before the American Bar Association convention which assembles in Boston next week. With the statement that "the most serious criticism of American criminal justice today is that the judges of the courts permit newspapers to usurp the court's own duties and functions," a special committee will recommend that "some method of preventing contempt of court by publication" be devised. It is clear that the committee had uppermost in mind the conduct of the Hauptmann trial.

Specifically, the committee suggests that a new statute be enacted to give the courts broader powers for punishing contempt. Immediately there springs to mind the recent instance in England where several London newspapers were assessed heavy fines for having referred to the man who pointed a pistol at King Edward as an "assassin" before he had come to trial. Such action is unheard of in this country. Should our courts have power to forbid what prosecuting attorneys love to call "trial by newspapers?"

Insofar as a stricter contempt law would tend to make repetitions of the Flemington circus less likely, the answer would be unanimously affirmative. But there are other considerations. Chief among them is the question of whether a broadening of court powers to restrain the press might result in a gag. It is not so in England. But British newspapers rarely feel the check of court authority because they rarely trespass on the court's domain.

Here, however, a certain type of newspaper has accustomed the public to expect sensational accounts of criminal trials deliberately designed to awaken a morbid curiosity and to pander to a debased public taste. There is, of course, some danger of invading the freedom of the press in endeavoring to suppress these irresponsible practices. But the newspapers can best safeguard their rights by recognizing an obligation to elevate public opinion instead of catering to its baser instincts.

Thus, the Bar Association committee's recommendation—though its intent will be everywhere applauded—must be carefully considered. Perhaps a more constructive beginning would lie in the direction of instituting controls over members of both bar and bench who contribute not a little to the indignity of criminal trials by deliberately wooing press comment, the better to promote their own personal fortunes.

Behind The Soviet Trial.

The mystery surrounding the trial in Moscow of the two "Old Bolsheviks," Zinoviev and Kamenev, together with 14 others similarly accused of having plotted the death of Joseph Stalin and his colleagues in the Soviet regime, is deepened rather than dispelled by the evidence brought forth in the courtroom.

With what is either Oriental fatalism or a prearranged attempt to win mercy through apparent frankness, the accused, with only two exceptions, have deliberately placed in the hands of the prosecution the indispensable evidence needed for their conviction. They have done so not sullenly, like men caught red-handed, but boastfully and enthusiastically, as though they thoroughly enjoyed the pleasure of tying the noose around their necks. They have fought with each other as to the priority of their guilt.

It is difficult to determine how much truth there is in these perfervid revelations of conspiracy; how much, on the other hand, they represent a show staged by the regime for some ulterior purpose, with Zinoviev, Kamenev and the others coached by the Ogpu to play their roles with gusto. The average reader of the testimony may well come to the conclusion that where there is so much smoke there must have been some fire. Yet the puzzle is why it is only now, 20 months after Zinoviev and Kamenev were arrested for their alleged complicity in the Kirov assassination, that they have been brought to trial on the current charge.

What may be the key to the mystery is the testimony of the self-confessed conspirators that the real ringleader was none other than Leon Trotzky; that his was the inspiration for the assassination of Kirov, his the plot to do away with Stalin and the other members of the present Soviet hierarchy and pave the way for another overturn in Russia.

Now it is no secret that Trotzky has not taken kindly to Stalin's assumption of power in Russia or that the former Red army chief would like once again to be dominant in the Soviet regime. He has himself made that clear in dozens of books and articles. Yet it is difficult to believe that Trotzky made himself a party to any such fantastic plot as that described in the Moscow court.

Since his exile from Russia, Trotzky has been under constant surveillance, so that his opportunity to indulge in conspiracies has obviously been limited. And it is certainly far-fetched to charge him with having sought and received the aid of the Gestapo to overthrow the Soviet regime and establish a Fascist dictatorship. Hitler as the ally of Trotzky? In its effort to discredit Stalin's bitterest opponent the Soviet government would appear, certainly in this particular, to have overstepped the bounds of the credible.

But why should Stalin seek this particular moment to make such charges against his enemy? Evidence on this point is lacking. But one may suspect that a contributory factor is that Trotzky today is in a position to damn the Stalin government as having betrayed the basic principle of the Communist creed, by abandoning the Leftist regime in Spain at a moment when that regime is beset by a horde of enemies.

At the beginning of the Spanish crisis funds were raised in Russia for support of the Madrid government. More recently the Soviet press has been extremely quiet regarding events in Spain. Eager to prevent a showdown at this time between communism and fascism, Russia has agreed to be neutral in the Spanish struggle. Those Communists who still believe in world revolution, therefore, may turn to Trotzky as the true disciple of Lenin. But Soviet Russia is not yet ready to break wholly with its past. Moscow would still fain be the Rome of the Communist religion. That is perhaps why all Moscow is so vigorously wielding the tar-brush against the arch-heretic Trotzky.

Still An Hour Behind.

Chicago's petition to be included within the Eastern standard time zone has been denied by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the ground that the enormous population of the city and the importance of its commerce extend the effect of its local time ordinances into nearby communities.

Chicago is so definitely inside the Central standard time zone that there is no valid reason for authorizing a shift. The effect of the city's daylight-saving ordinance upon local train schedules and upon the commercial activities of nearby communities and farm areas is confusing enough without adopting standard time rulings that would have no regard for sectional differences in sun time.

The lines of demarcation between our standard time zones are already too erratic. Instead of multiplying such irregularities, in response to some fancied necessity or assumed advantage of beginning the day an hour sooner, changes might well be sought with the object of simplifying present time zones.

Yes, confidence is returning, but so much of it is of the wrong kind. For instance, a bandit tried recently to hold up a Norfolk shooting gallery.

The Liberty League.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At last the cat is out of the bag. It was left to Mr. John Smith (August 12 Letters to the Editor) to reveal the true purpose of the Liberty League. A Fascist lobby, is it? And here, too, for the first time someone has put a finger on the elusive "economic royalists." They are the leaguers who must be—if Mr. Smith is correctly informed—simply stooping down from their economic thrones to dally with preserving the constitutional liberties of the American people, knowing full well that those liberties are now only a myth.

But one wonders at the ability of Mr. Smith to discover this "dangerous lobby," when the Senate committee which recently spent a great deal of time and money investigating lobbying activities apparently failed to reveal this most "dangerous" activity of the league. For did not that committee scan all the telegrams sent into or out of Washington for several months? It must have seen all messages to or from the league in that time, and, unless I am mistaken, no official of the league appeared before the committee for questioning.

Of course, it could not be that there are a hundred thousand persons (is that the league's membership?) who are willing to unite in, do a little work for, and contribute a little money in support of an organization dedicated to the defense of the liberties which their forefathers fought and died for.

And if it should just happen that Mr. Smith is not fully employed, he may feel it his duty to offer his special detective ability to the lobby investigating committee; or to donate his general ability to that certain national campaign chairman who promised the country a dirty campaign.

Years ago, a homely philosopher, Josh Billings, left a word of advice which it still pertinent. He said: "It's better not to know so much than to know so much that ain't so."

Unnecessary Deaths.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "No Virus Causes Indigestion," of July 24, citing the many remedies for human ailments which are constantly coming to the fore, has a pathetic side, as well as an amusing one.

In The Post of January 16, 1936, an item from the Journal of the A. M. A. gives a new diabetic remedy from four Danish doctors, stating that it is more "comparable to the antidiabetic action of nature than is the old insulin treatment." Today there is so much invested in laboratory methods of "preventing," or curing disease, that their products are practically forced upon the general practitioner. It seems that "regular" medicine would rather have people die by "scientific" treatments than to have them recover by irregular methods!

Dr. Robert Walter, of Walters Park, Pa., has never lost a case of diphtheria and has never used antitoxin. He writes: "The medical profession has largely accepted antitoxin, not because of its intrinsic worth, or the success of its application, but because of their own helplessness in the presence of a fatal disease with which they have never been able successfully to cope. Under such circumstances anything is better than nothing."

The deaths of children from diphtheria are entirely unnecessary, but with the prevailing treatment they will continue.

Seeking A Parallel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following from the Epilogue of Green's "Short History of the English People" may interest some of your readers.

"The peace which closed the great war with Napoleon in 1815 left Britain feverish and exhausted . . . The pressure of the heavy taxation and of the debt which now reached £800,000,000, was embittered by the general distress of the country. The rapid development of English industry for a time ran ahead of the world's demands, and mills and manufactories were brought to a standstill. The scarcity caused by a series of bad harvests was intensified by the selfish legislation of the landowners in Parliament . . . Wheat had reached famine prices.

"Society too was disturbed by the great changes in employment consequent on the sudden return to peace after 20 years of war and of the disbanding of the immense forces employed at sea and on land. The movement against machinery revived in the formidable riots of the Luddites, and the distress of the rural poor brought about a rapid increase of crime. A dangerous irritation drove more violent agitators into treasonable disaffection and silly plots. The death of George III in 1820 and the accession of his son only added to the disturbance of men's minds."

Pedestrian Types.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree with Capt. Coe when he suggests in "Letters to the Editor" that signs be placed at intersections for the benefit of pedestrians reading: "Watch the Lights—Not the Autos." And this should be backed up by granting the police department right to arrest jay-walkers.

There seems to be three classes of pedestrians, first the idiot type who walks unconcernedly at any and all times into the path of moving traffic with the well-known dare-you-to-hit-me swagger. Second is that largest group—the morons. Members of this great fraternity are too smart to dart in front of moving traffic. They simply stand about 4 feet out in the street like duck pins waiting to be bowled over. When a lull in traffic occurs they promptly cross the intersection. Red lights mean nothing to them.

Then there is the small group of geniuses. These do not so much as set foot in the street until the light is green. They also are constantly watching out of the corners of their eyes for cars making left turns. This last type is willing to wait a moment for the green light while others glance scornfully back upon them as though they were slow pokes or hillbillies just from the sticks.

For life's sake let's all try hard to graduate to this third class of pedestrian.

Swimming Pool Needs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Keep up your fight for the swimming pools.

No city needs them worse. My first boyhood swim was in the old basin—40 years ago. Since then I have seen such nearby cities as Baltimore develop a perfect neighborhood chain of pools. Every city now has them.

Don't emphasize "underprivileged" children. All children need pools. Don't emphasize children too much. Boys and girls up to 40 and 50 years old enjoy and need the pools.

"Sowing The Wind."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Sowing the Wind," is the most sensible and commendable article I have seen concerning the revolution in Spain. Theirs is strictly a family affair and should be looked upon and treated as such by all outsiders.

We are not so sure we will not have another domestic disagreement ourselves.

Unconscious Comparison?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reason and logic, naturally, rate no place in political speeches or campaigns, but some arguments used by the Postmaster-on-leave in his latest outburst should excite laughter in a way not intended. Mr. Farley calmly credits the cameback in the motor industry to the New Deal, leaving the inference it could have been done under no other auspices. What he discreetly left out is that cotton and farm curtailment plans completely annulled the re-employment furnished by an industry he justly praises.

He fails to give hearers the option of reading between the lines. That the motor industry, from Ford down—an elderly Detroit gentleman dimly remembered as something of a humanitarian himself—fought all efforts to impose the NRA and other New Deal nostrums; its actual advance keeping pace with each successive court overthrow of Rooseveltian decrees.

This compels comparison with the Harding deflationary depression—a favorite text of Dealers in their muddier moods. Building operations jumped 20 per cent in Harding's first year, bettered that by 100 per cent his second. Motor industry matched this showing. Six millions unemployed—Democrats' own campaign figures—were back at work. This deplorable state of near peak employment and high wages was to last some years, despite lack of multiple bureaus, busted budgets, debts for future generations, or similar New Deal patents.

Dealers have not yet asserted these results were in spite of the Harding administration. But that was, they say, and no disagreement is attempted here, a horrible administration. So when the New Deal credits itself with the modest comeback witnessed, is it unconsciously pointing a comparison?

The Fight Announcers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who himself commits the sin of broadcasting frequently, I want to lift my voice in a protest that is everything but jealous against the blether and tosh and flapdoodle exuded by the men who have acquired haloes and traditions as superannouncers. I have directly in mind the Husing-Coe (don't forget it is Socker Coe) balderdash regatta during and after (a longer time after than the "fight" itself lasted) the fight between Joe Louis and Sharkey.

First off, it wasn't a fight at all. The ravings of these two high-powered lung-and-tongue experts that it was a wonderful fight was totally unconvincing to those who heard or saw the fiasco. The whole set-up was a mystery as to cause or excuse. What it proves for a young husky to smash an old gentleman bartender from Beanopolis, nobody knows. The conclusion of the whole matter is "So what?"

The Post Impressionist

First Love—At Second Sight.

Post Office, Saturday.

ALTHOUGH this columnist has never hesitated to scold the motion-picture people when he thought they required scolding, he has, upon the whole, thought kindly of them. He believes they are the greatest organized human help to the greatest number of mankind, the modern Door of Earthly Escape.

In short, the Post-Impressionist has for the past two years contended that, all-in-all, the pictures were doing as well as could be expected—i. e., considering that they don't send for him to tell them how to achieve perfection.

However, we have now detected the American cinema in something of which we disapprove with uncommon distinctness. And our conscience commands our uncommon censure.

The motion-picture has its rights. To hear some of the motion-picture critics talk—not Nelson Bell, yet some of them—you might think it hadn't. Nevertheless, it has.

Also nevertheless, it has its duties.

If the motion-picture hires an actor, it hires that actor's best acting efforts.

But "a man's a man for a' that." Hire the actor as you may, there remains the question as to just where the hired actor ceases and just where there begins the legally inviolable and inalienable man.

Now read the following dispatch and tell us whether this question is not involved therein—whether, indeed, it is not being answered with heartless brutality:

"HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—Merle Oberon, much admired by thousands of screen-enthusiasts, has lately, so Hollywood gossip says, been still more admired by a fellow member of this city's colony of motion-picture players. In fact, the rest of the colony have for some time been eagerly awaiting the moment—obviously not yet arrived—when this young fellow will have asked her a certain question and received a certain reply. The only trouble is that the reply remains uncertain—at least that's what the colony says. It says: 'Will, or will not, Merle marry the tall, soulful English actor, David Niven?'

"Even David doesn't know—because Merle won't, in that particular, open her lips.

"Well, now David has been given a bitter assignment. For the first time, he is to play in the same picture with Merle; he is to be pictured as in love with her—but, alas, too lightly! He is to be pictured as lightly giving her up to a rival. It is a lover enacted by Brian Aherne who marries the girl portrayed by Merle."

After you have got the cloying sweetness of this press-agency personality out of your mouth, consider the sour facts.

It is evident that Mr. Niven—a stranger, a citizen of a friendly foreign power, a guest within our gates—is being put to a supreme test of the artistic temperament. Here, if we are to believe the press-agent—which, I admit, we generally can't, but which I somehow feel that we this time may—here, I say, is an actor who loves an actress in real life, but whose place in her affections remains uncertain. And he is required to appear with her, in a picture, as a careless lover surrendering her to another man!

One assumes that Mr. Niven was under some sort of blanket contract with the producing firm.

Well, of course, there is involved, on the purely artistic side, a problem that is as ancient as the art of the theatre. It is even as ancient as the time when people began to tell lies:

Should an actor try so to "feel" his role that, believing himself to be what he portrays, he completely submerges his personality in the illusion?

Or should his critical self stand always aside from his performing self, weighing each emotion (real or pretended) before it is registered and objectively dictating how it shall be registered so as to produce the most convincing counterfeit of sincerity?

But the present instance is no mere academic version of that old problem. If this Hollywood unfortunate attempts to answer either of these inquiries in the affirmative, he courts disaster.

On the the one hand, his genuine emotions (which one charitably supposes to be strong) may make it impossible for him either to feel or consciously create the callous role—in which case, the picture will be ruined.

On the other hand, if (temporarily, but perfectly) art conquers heart, the lady as well as the audience may be convinced—in which case the artist will probably lose whatever chance he has of her in the actual world.

To a mere motion-picture layman, it would seem that the wretched fellow's sole safe course lies in refusing the part:

He ought to plead that his constitutional rights (if, as a foreigner, he has any) are being invaded by the director—or whatever flinty official it is who assigns roles in cinema-dramas.

This is a flagrant case of the infliction of a both cruel and barbarous punishment.

Sermon Forum.

I can't just put my hands on the clipping, but I refer to the recent suggestion of a New York clergymen that there be a moratorium on sermons—a radical proposal and obviously incapable of execution. A more feasible idea, it seems to me, would be to encourage the reverend clergy to preach to their hearts' content but, as an intelligent innovation, submit their remarks to inspection and discussion in the papers, which customarily publish without comment on Monday mornings excerpts from the wisdom delivered from the leading pulpits of the town.

This is not to suggest a news paper censorship of the churches but merely a forum and reasonable examination of statements which under present conditions are privileged and exempt from dissent on any grounds, whether truth, violent intemperance or ordinary sense.

I am afraid my suggestion, too, is visionary, but I can't suppress a feeling that a subject of such importance to all human beings should be freely discussed in a country which makes education one of its principal interests.

Unfortunately, education of the formal sort, measured by credits, examinations and hours of attendance at class, is not synonymous with intelligence, and many people who hold official certificates of education are unable to separate their thoughts from their emotions in religious discussions.

For this reason it might be disastrous to any publication to print frank, logical and dispassionate analyses of the sermons. The more faulty the sermon the more violent and destructive the retaliation might be.

• • • •

Yet it seems a mistake to leave entirely to the clergy the administration of a subject affecting not only the relations between sects and possibly the salvation of men's souls but the peace of the state.

The shaggy Communist, howling on his soap box in a manner to incite violence, is subject to instant arrest at the discretion of any policeman in the interests of peace and order. A clergyman, however, with a bone in his neck, may stir his flock to hatred against card players, persons who dance or drink gin, freckle-faced people, bow-legged people and all members of other religious sects who obviously do not agree with his beliefs and, therefore, must be wrong and consequently enemies of the one true God.

This hating of enemies of the one true God of persons who adore that God according to a wrong formula often has developed into wars of extermination, but the state of the world today gives no assurance that God was entirely pleased.

That some clergymen are narrow can hardly be doubted by anyone who recalls the clerical phase of prohibition and of the late revival of the Ku Klux Klan or inquires into the minimum qualifications for the cloth. That some are brutal, arrogant, irresponsible and eager for power has been demonstrated often, and tinges of insanity have been recognized in influential ministers of the sensational type.

Some clergymen, enjoying special privileges and perquisites from the whole public, have endeavored to set their people against other elements of the community and have interfered with business and attempted, with some success, to intimidate the press. And, like those statesmen who cloak themselves in congressional immunity to slander and revile victims who have neither defense nor redress, unworthy clergy have used freedom of worship as a justification for activities which blaspheme the worship of God.

The existence of so many sects and offshoots of sects suggests disagreement among the very men who occupy a special position as God's spokesmen. The layman, therefore, would seem to be entitled to gentle, philosophical discussions weighing one sect against another, but the question is: "Could he take them as mere discussions and not as foul attacks on God, the Redeemer of his teaching?" History and the present raise the unhappy suspicion that population intelligence may never reach this plane.

Yet so great is the influence of religion, so grave are the responsibilities of men who speak from a privileged position under conditions which give special power to their exhortation, that the public, the Nation, humanity should reserve some rights for the protection of their peace, their principles and their very lives.

Poland's Position

French General's Visit To Warsaw, Obscured By Spanish Unrest, Suggests That Poland Seeks To Hedge Her Nazis Entente.

By Barnet Nover.

THE SPANISH CRISIS has, for good reasons, tended to blanket all other developments that have been taking place in Europe during recent weeks, even some that must be regarded as potentially of major importance. It has, for instance, tended to put in the shade the negotiations for a new Locarno treaty; the signature of a new German-Lithuanian commercial treaty which may, while putting the dangerous Memel problem on the shelf, strengthen Germany's domination of the Baltic; the drift of Belgian public opinion away from France, and last but not least, the Franco-Polish military conversations held at Warsaw during the past week.

It is much too early to gauge the full significance of the visit of Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of the French general staff, to the Polish capital where he was the guest of Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly, Pilsudski's successor as inspector general of the Polish army.

It is not hard to believe that it may mak the beginning of a rapprochment between two old allies, France and Poland, who for some years have been drifting apart. It may even, although this is less certain, lead to the re-establishment, in its pristine form, of the Franco-Polish alliance.

But, at any rate, it is not without immediate importance. In the first place it must be regarded as a definite indication that Poland is willing to be wooed by France and that France is most eager to do such wooing. And, secondly, it constitutes an indirect but none the less clear warning to Berlin that Poland has more than one string in its bow.

Nazis And Russians Hover Over Poland.

THE RECENT TREND in European diplomacy has proved alarming to Poland. A buffer state between Nazi Germany and Communist Russia, whose antagonism toward each other steadily grows more virulent, Poland faces the unhappy prospect of again becoming the battleground of those giant powers.

There was a time when Poland had no choice as to the role it might play in European high politics. It was the ally of France and a member of the French bloc of states. This position of satellite was galling to Polish pride. But with Germany and Russia friendly to each other and individually hostile to Poland, the Polish leaders saw no alternative to close co-operation with whatever government was in power in Paris.

With a short-sightedness which they have since had reasons to regret, France openly acted on the presumption that Poland was, willy-nilly, tied to the French chariot, that the east European republic perforce had to look to Paris for that material, military and diplomatic support it needed against its enemies on the east and west.

And certainly before the coming into power of Hitler, German-Polish antagonism was one of the constants of European diplomacy. No matter what coalition held power in Berlin, the policy of Berlin was to seek revision of the eastern frontiers—i. e. the return of Upper Silesia, Danzig, the Corridor, and possibly Posen as well. Even Stresemann, great exponent of the doctrine of fulfilment of the peace treaties, refused to accept in eastern Europe the same iron-clad arrangement he was willing to make with France and Belgium in the west. The furtherest he was willing to go, so far as Poland was concerned, was to sign a treaty of arbitration and nonaggression with that country.

Polish Pride Hurt By Disregard Of French.

AS LONG AS German-Polish antagonism remained in such a state of hopeless antagonism Poland kept green its friendship with France, however irritated it might be at the French habit of treating it as less than an equal. But after Locarno, which seemed to insure France against direct attack by Germany, Poland's previous irritations developed into alarm that France might throw it to the wolves. It was certainly not reassuring to the Warsaw government that, without consulting Poland, France agreed to Mussolini's proposal for a four-power pact which, it seemed to the Poles, would mean that four great powers were planning to treat all other European nations as negligible quantities. It was even more disheartening that in France a campaign was begun to drop the Franco-Polish alliance as a dangerous liability.

The break came in January, 1934. To prevent that isolation of the Third Reich, which then seemed in process of achievement, Hitler agreed to shelve for 10 years the time-honored German policy of agitating for a revision of the eastern frontiers. His olive branch was accepted by Poland.

Undoubtedly it was realized at Warsaw that in so doing the Nazi leader had not abandoned his plan of regaining for Germany all the territory the Reich had lost by the war and adding additional areas to it. But they believed that the opportunity to be spared, for a decade at least, the eternal complications arising out of the quarrels over Germany's eastern frontiers, was one not to be ignored. In ten years Poland, too, would be stronger and more populous than it had been, more of a match for a resurgent Reich. Moreover, in the meantime, a German-Polish entente would make possible, as it did, the signing of that long-delayed commercial treaty essential to Poland's economic welfare. But however valuable the 1934 treaty may have been to Poland in other ways it was not least desirable because it constituted a recognition of Poland's status as an equal and of its importance as a factor in European diplomacy. This was flattering to Polish pride.

To be sure Poland insisted the German-Polish treaty did not mean the abandonment or even the weakening of its prior alliance with France. But it proved difficult for Poland to keep an even balance between its old friend and its new. More and more the Franco-Polish alliance was weakened; more and more Poland seemed to be moving into the German camp. This was seen in the cold reception given to the late Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, when he visited Warsaw and the equally unenthusiastic reception of M. Laval; in Poland's refusal to become a party to the proposed Eastern Locarno; in the increasingly intimate relations between Warsaw and Berlin.

Polish-German Entente Stirred France And Russia.

BOTH IN the Soviet capital and in Paris the Polish-German rapprochment was viewed as a dangerous development, since it tended to strengthen the Third Reich. Abandoning their old antagonism toward each other, France and Russia became allies. If Poland had previously demonstrated that its need of France was no longer as great as it had been, France was now indicating that it had found a new supporter in Eastern Europe to take Poland's place.

From the Polish point of view the Franco-Soviet pact was an evil. But of late its position has been further endangered by German maneuvers which have weakened the Third Reich's dependence on its eastern neighbor. The Austro-German agreement has made possible a rapprochement with Italy. The commercial pact with Lithuania has possibly paved the way for the addition of that small Baltic state, whose hostility to Poland remains unquenchable, into the German camp. And in the meantime, German rearmament has grown apace. How long the Warsaw government could not help asking itself before Germany will choose to ignore its pledges under the 1934 non-aggression treaty with Poland as it chose to ignore Locarno?

The re-emergence of the Danzig question at this time seemed a partial answer to this question. Germany would preserve its entente with Poland only so long as that entente was useful to it and no longer.

From the Polish point of view, therefore, it is essential to do something to breathe life into the moribund Franco-Polish alliance. This does not mean that it is prepared to join the ranks of Germany's enemies. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe that it will do all it can to keep the entente with the Third Reich even while providing itself with an alternative in the form of improved relations with France.

The Gamelin visit, soon to be followed by a visit of Gen. Rydz-Smigly to France are in all likelihood steps in that direction. Whether it will lead to a return of Poland to its traditional moorings, however, will depend less on France than on Germany. In the meantime the Franco-Polish flirtation has again revealed the essential instability of the European diplomatic combinations.

4 Trade Heads Credit Revival To New Deal

2 Bankers, Manufacturer, Department Store Chief Praise Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 21.—Two bank presidents, a large department store head and a manufacturer tonight declared New Deal measures were largely responsible for business recovery and urged the re-election of President Roosevelt.

The speakers were Edward A. Filene, president of William Filene's Sons Co., Boston department store; William H. Regnery, president of the Western Shade Cloth Co., Chicago; Maurice L. Breidenthal, president of the Security National Bank of Kansas City, Kans., and William T. McCaffery, president of the Lincoln National Bank & Trust Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

They spoke on a Nation-wide broadcast sponsored by the Democratic National Committee.

"No clear thinking business man would discharge an executive under whom business had climbed from failure to success and hire some unknown who promised to reduce total expenditures without reducing any one expenditure," Filene said, speaking from Boston.

Briedanthal, speaking from Kansas City, said:

"Although I have the greatest respect for Gov. Landon personally, I am genuinely convinced it would be unwise and harmful to this country if President Roosevelt should be defeated.

"By every term we can apply, the present Chief Executive is entitled to re-election. He has been a successful President, he has brought us from panic to prosperity."

Speaking from Rochester, McCaffery said he did not subscribe to the view that recovery, particularly in the banking field, was due to natural causes.

At Chicago, Regnery said:

"Personally, as a businessman, I am for the re-election of President Roosevelt with all the fervor and all the intensity and sincerity at my command.

"It is my firm and honest belief that we are in the prosperous and enviable position that we occupy today as a direct result of the policies which his Administration put into operation."

New Era Here, Asserts Lemke Attacking Foes

By the Associated Press.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Aug. 21.—William Lemke, North Dakota Representative and candidate of the Union Party for President, combined an attack on the National Administration tonight with an assertion that "we are going from the old to a new civilization."

In an address prepared for delivery before a Farmer-Labor Union picnic, the candidate declared the Administration's "bureaucrats are dangerous to our democracy."

"Most of us out here in Minnesota and the Western States—as do intelligent people everywhere—know that our conomic problem is underconsumption and maldistribution; in other words, that there is a scarcity.

"In Washington, the bureaucrats still believe there is overproduction, and they probably will go on believing such nonsense as long as we permit them to remain in power."

Asserting the natural wealth of the Nation made it self-sufficient and "able to develop economic freedom for all," Lemke continued:

"The United States can, and must, abolish poverty, not by mingling it with the poverty of other nations, but by an ever-increasing and higher standard of living, not for the few but for the many.

"This, of course, is probably incomprehensible to the administration at Washington. Judging from what has been going on there it is obvious that the Administration and its bureaucrats do not yet realize that our civilization is in transition.

"Whether we wish it or not, we are going from the old to the new civilization. * * * Whether this new civilization will be better than the old depends upon the intelligence we use in developing it."

Loyalist Munitions Loaded in Mexico

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Aug. 21 (AP).—A heavy cargo of war materials was loaded tonight on the Spanish liner Magallanes amid ominous rumors it never woul reach loyal Spanish government forces.

Fascist sympathizers here said the ship and its freight of Mexican arms and munitions would be fair game for rebel bombing planes. They declared it almost certainly would be sunk, even if 44 cruise passengers remained aboard. The passengers, all from Catalan, Spain, however, were ordered off by the Madrid government. They will be sent home through New York.

35th Friar Sentenced In German Mass Trials

Koblenz, Germany, Aug. 21 (AP).—Mass trials of 215 Franciscan Friars accused of improper relations with their young charges were resumed today after being recessed during the Olympics.

Brother Gratian was sentenced to a year and nine months imprisonment. Reports published by the Nazi press said he had confessed. He was the thirty-fifth Friar to be sentenced.

Soviet Judges Laugh at 'Dime Novel' Plotters

Tribunal and Court Crowd Amused at Testimony of Stalin Enemies.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 21.—All the intrigue and devices—even the comic relief—of a dime thriller were injected today into the trial of 16 confessed counter-revolutionary plotters.

A secret code to smuggle information to conspirators across Russia's border, mysteriously based on "The Arabian Nights," added a dramatic touch to the freely given admissions of the schemers against the life of Dictator Josef Stalin and the Soviet State.

There were secret compartments in trunks, invisible ink, shadowy foreign secret agents, disguised bombs were wrapped in "diplomas," as the trial moved swiftly to its end.

Testimony linked Leon Trotzky, former Bolshevik leader and now an exile in Norway, as an arch-conspirator in the terrorist ring. Both the government and the defendants accuse him of plotting and shaping the scheme for a dramatic coup to plunge the Soviet Union into chaos and to erect a Fascist state on the ruins of Communism.

Messenger Confesses.

Edward Solomonovich Holzmann, with reluctance and confusion, told how he traveled as liaison man for the ring, taking coded messages from T. Smirnoff, head of the Trotzkyites in Moscow, to Trotzky's son, Syedoff, in Berlin.

"Smirnoff gave me a coby of 'The Arabian Nights,' Holzmann, 54 years old, bald and perspiring, related. "In some way which I do not remember it served as a secret code.

"Upon meeting Syedoff in Berlin I handed him Smirnoff's report on economic and political conditions in the U. S. S. R. and the Arabian Nights code."

He told of meeting Trotzky in Copenhagen, and quoted the alleged ringleader as saying, "The only way to remove Stalin is through terror."

When the uncomfortable Holzmann became confused and gave contradictory answers to Prosecutor Andrey Vishinsky's questions, the whole courtroom broke into laughter.

The four stern, military judges sitting at a cloth-draped table at the head of the pillared assembly hall of the former Nobles Club joined the laughter.

Nazis Implicated.

Dr. Nathan Lazarevich Lourier, another defendant, declared a German engineer and agent, Franz Veis, abetted the terrorist plans in Moscow in 1932. Lourier said he learned later Veis was sent to Russia by Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Nazi secret police.

He said Stalin was to have been the chief victim, but the plotters wanted also the lives of Klementi Voroshiloff, the war commissar; Lazarus M. Kaganovich, commissar of transport, and G. K. Ordzhonikidze, commissar of heavy industry.

Lourier testified Moses Lourier instructed him to kill Andre A. Zhdanoff, successor to the assassinated Sergei M. Kiroff as secretary to the Leningrad Communist Party. He said he was to have shot him at a great May Day celebration in Leningrad but could not get close enough.

Lourier said long-made plans to shoot Voroshiloff failed because the commissar's car "always drove too fast." Then bombs were deemed necessary, he said.

Corroborating testimony that there were three separate attempts to kill Stalin, witnesses said bombs labeled "diploma" were to have been sent him as he stood on the tomb of Lenin in Moscow's Red Square during the last May Day celebration.

Aimee McPherson Settles Libel Suit

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 21.—A $500,000 slander suit against Aimee Semple McPherson, preacher of the Four-Square gospel, was settled out of court today—for a reported $500—and cleared the way for harmony again in Angelus Temple.

The suit had been filed by Vivian Denton, discharged as publicity agent at the temple February 10.

Aimee and Miss Rheba Crawford, her co-pastor, formerly known as the "Angel of Broadway," have been at odds for four months over matters of temple policy. During that time the co-pastor has made no appearances at the temple.

Miss Denton based her slander suit against Mrs. McPherson on charges the preacher called her "an imp of satin," a "child of the devil" and other names.

Man's Existence in U. S. Is Put at 15,000 Years

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Dr. Barnum Brown, curator of paleontology at the American Museum of Natural history, commenting on the discovery of human remains and a ground sloth in the same cave in Arizona, today said "we have every reason to believe early humans existed in America up to 15,000 years ago."

A noted "bones hunter" himself, last winter Dr. Brown visited the Lower Grand Canyon area where the discovery was made.

"It is a major discovery—a most remarkable thing," he said. "It is apparently the most complete sloth that has ever been found." Dr. Brown doubted, however, whether the human remains dated back more than 2,000 years.

Gold Boom

AAA Sugar Checks Lead To Huge Bubble In Philippines, With New Millionaires Sprouting Every Day In Stock Exchange Fever.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT money amounting to $16,000,000 funneled into the Philippines through the AAA in the form of sugar benefits payment has started a gold boom of unprecedented proportions, bringing along with it the attendant feverish speculation in gold stocks.

The sugar checks could not be invested in the sugar industry or in any of the formerly prosperous Philippine industries like coconut, abaca, and tobacco. Shrinking as a result of recently inaugurated American market restrictions, all these industries have suddenly become unattractive to investors. The gold industry, the Philippines' only growing industry today, remained the only attractive investment bet. So practically all the sugar money went into gold stocks, but the $16,000,000 only started idle capital moving in the same direction.

A boom that refuses to be discouraged has been the result. On the Philippine Stock Exchange, practically nothing but gold stocks are traded. Daily transactions amount these days to nearly $1,500,000, an unprecedented figure. So alarmed are some of the conservative gold-minting groups that they have categorically characterized the present market as a speculator's market, and pointed out that whereas the entire gold industry is being traded today gold stocks worth only $125,000,000, there are valued at $225,000,000, so that fully $100,000,000 of these stocks are water.

Gold King's Warning Goes Unheeded In Escolta.

F. O. HAUSSERMAN, son of the Philippines' gold king and his spokesman in his absence in the United States, recently issued a solemn warning, stating that the stock market was getting out of hand, and that a fatal crash was inevitable unless the industry sobered up. He pointed out that there was an entire disregard of factors upon which investors should rely, like ore properties, and mill performance. Capital, so essential to the industry, will be scared away, he declared, if the market should now crash, leaving present investors nothing but the shirts on their back.

But the boom was so far gone that it could not be discouraged even by so dire a prediction from so potent a source. After a brief hesitation in the trading, while investors read the newspapers, the boom resumed its upward flight, and trading again became as spirited as ever.

The gold speculation is not due entirely to the $16,000,000 sugar money and the abundance of suckers. In reality, the gold industry is the Philippines' coming industry. With its total export of gold, valued at $20,000,000 this year, it will have established itself as the islands' third largest export industry, exceeded only by sugar and coconut products, which, however, are on the decline. The readiness of investors to put in their money has made mining development so rapid and extensive, that the most scientific gold group in the Philippines, Marsman & Co., has predicted doubling of the gold production in 1940. And as Spanish capital available in the Philippines has been marooned here by the Spanish Revolution, and as this capital had been suddenly though quietly increased just before the Spanish troubles started, the gold industry further benefited from the situation.

Boom Has Improved Manila Bank's Conditions.

PERHAPS the most effective factor which has changed even the local banking situation is the emergence of millionaires from the present boom. Several months ago, the banks were reducing their rates of interest on deposits and loans because of their excessive liquidity—millions of pesos were idle in their vaults. Today, the vaults are once more empty of idle money practically all of which has found its way to the gold stock exchange.

Between 10 and 12 o'clock in the morning, Manila's law offices, medical clinics, Government offices and other places of work are practically deserted. At about the same time one will see the brokerage offices on the Escolta bursting with people—lawyers, doctors, bureau directors, business men, students. And the floor of the Stock Exchange is jammed to capacity. The tribe, now known as the Escolta miners, is at work. They watch the gyrations of the stock quotations with avidity, and trade recklessly.

It is not so much that a sucker is born every minute. Money—real money—is being made on the exchange. Among people who have available money to invest — and many of them start with only $50—there is no other topic of conversation but gold stock profits. People who used to earn $50 a month are now talking in terms of $500-profits a day. In the schools and colleges, in the theaters, in the cafes, in the bars, in the Legislature—everywhere, in fact—gold talk prevails.

Millionaires Sprouting On All Sides In Islands.

THERE ARE at least five Philippine Americans who started on shoestrings just a year ago and who are now accounted as millionaires. There are also about the same number of Spaniards who have been making killings on the gold stock market. And there are commensurately more Filipinos who have made fortunes trading in gold stocks. The gold dividends have been so overshadowed by the profits from trading that even conservative investors who have held blocks of stocks for years are now operating on the market. The contagion has spread far and wide.

And the market is still going up. There is real gold in the Philippines. The yellow metal is now being produced in widely separated points as the Baguio district, Camarines, and Masbate. In practically every place the popular mind has come to believe there must be gold in the islands. And some $10,000,000 of British and Chinese capital has come during the last few months on the strength of this belief.

The Once Over

("Chicago, Ill.—Mail order catalogues will be issued in color and rotogravure this year."—News item.)

I remember, I remember,
The catalogue of old,
That list of all the things the big
Mail order houses sold;
Necessities of man,
From buggies, plows and harnesses
Down to a frying pan.

I remember, I remember,
The pages so replete
With garden tools and fishing rods
And chairs and rattan seats;
With rubber boots and bicycles
And iron stoves galore—
With fly nets, axle grease and knobs
To fit the kitchen door.

I remember, I remember,
How I would thumb the book
To see how many dollars the De Luxe air rifle took;
To get the magic lantern's price,
And hope when I grew big
I'd send an order in by mail
To rush a racing gig.

I remember, I remember,
The saddles and the whips,
The blouses, neckties, shoes and shirts
And things for wagon trips;
The letter for a gingham dress
I'd watch my mother write—
The anxious watching of the mail
And then her fine delight!

I remember, I remember,
The illustrations done
In simple drawings, black and white—
The finest 'neath the sun!
What worlds they opened up to me,
What wonders were unveiled!
What fields of romance I would ride—
What distant seas I sailed!

L'Envoi.

Now comes the color catalogue,
With roto pictures, too—
An hundred gorgeous color plates
To bring a spell that's new . . .
But, lad, in all its brilliant hues,
I wonder if you'll see
The glories that the catalogue
Of old could bring to me?

Unnecessary Cruelty.

Soviet Russia has introduced the novelty of adding to the punishment of principals in criminal trials by not allowing microphones or photographers in court. The time may even come when courts the world over will prohibit the judge from autographing baseballs.

And it is only a step from that to prohibiting the sale of lemonade, popcorn, peanuts and toy balloons in the courtroom while the judge is charging a jury.

Kind Edward tended bar in a Yugoslavian cafe the other night. Maybe this explains that recent headline, "Great Britain Shaky."

Joe Louis whipped Jack Sharkey the other night and there is a growing rumor, sportsmanship in the fight racket being what it is, that he will now be tried against Abe Attell and Paul Berlenbach.

Nothing is sure in this life but death and announcements that there will be no higher taxes.

August Dusk.

How tenderly the dusk comes down the country ways
After the hot and sultry day is past;
A gentle rustle wakes among the tired trees
And languid leaves lift up their heads at last.
So coolness lays her soft caress upon the land;
And, with a sudden swaying of each stalk,
In long and gleaming waves of petal-lace
White phlox foams gayly down
—Florence Staunton Capen.

The rotogravure section pictures from the Spanish fighting zone would seem to confirm the stories that it is almost a daily occurrence to order a big battle done all over for the cameramen.

Ben Feingold reports that a certain lady radio star, after a few strong cocktails the other night, was found inside of a grandfather's clock trying to get her nickel back from the telephone company.

Key Men in A.T.&T. Inquiry to Remain

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday said recent reports that key men in the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. investigation would be supplanted were "wholly unauthorized and without any official sanction whatever."

The commission's statement was occasioned by published reports that Samuel Becker, counsel in charge of the investigation, would be removed, and that John H. Bickley, chief accountant, might resign.

The statement said Becker was "a brilliant lawyer of high integrity," while Bickley was "recognized as one of the very ablest accountants engaged in utility regulation."

Nuptial Parties Start For Katherine Morris

Mrs. H. S. Chandler to Give Luncheon Today for Alta Vista Girl Who Will Marry Lewis H. Mills September 4.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Miss Katherine Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bateman Morris, of Alta Vista, Md., will be guest of honor this afternon at a luncheon at which Mrs. H. S. Chandler will entertain at Olyney Inn in Olney, Md. Miss Morris' marriage to Mr. Lewis Howard Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mills, of Corning, Kans., will take place September 4 in Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Olney Inn has much romantic interest for the bride-to-be. Her grandfather, Mr. Granville Farquhar, brought her grandmother to this house as a bride, and her mother, the former Miss Faith Farquhar, was born there and was married to Mr. Morris on the lawn.

Although the house has undergone many changes in the ten years it has been owned by Mrs. Clara May Downey and converted into an inn, the original rooms have been preserved and have lost none of their charm, as more have been added. The house retains the atmosphere of the cheerful hospitality of the simple Quaker community.

Beyond the entrance hall, which is a reproduction of the early American kitchen in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, is the reception room where the Farquhar family gathered to spend their evenings. The main dining room off of this, where the luncheon will be served, overlooks the spot where the mother and father of the bride were married.

Covers for Fourteen.

Covers will be laid for 14 guests. Bubble bowls filled with roses, snapdragons and delphinium reflected in mirrors, will form the centerpiece and, on either side will be Dresden china figurines, matching the Dresden service plates, the colors of which will be repeated in the colors of the flowers.

The guests will include, in addition to the guest of honor, her mother, her sister-in-law, Mrs. Edwin Bateman Morris, jr., Mrs. Howard Chapman, Miss Patty Morris, sister of the bride-to-be; Mrs. L. C. McClure, Mrs. N. P. Thompson, Miss Elizabeth Towne, Mrs. C. C. Fifield, Miss Mary Willis Farquhar, Mrs. Julian Lakey and Miss Betsy Watkins.

Other affairs which will be given in honor of Miss Morris will include a dinner next Friday night at which her brother and sister-in-law will entertain, a luncheon the following afternoon at which Miss Elizabeth Towne will be hostess at Toll House Tavern, with friends who were in Miss Morris' class in high school as guests; a trousseau tea at which her mother and sister, Miss Patty Morris, will entertain at their home September 2, and a dinner which will also be given at Olney Inn, following the wedding rehearsal on the evening of September 3.

Sister Will be Maid.

The bride has chosen for her attendants her sister, Miss Patty Morris, as maid of honor; her sister-in-law, Mrs. Edwin Mateman,Morris, jr., Mrs. Chandler, Miss Towne and Mrs. Edward Walton, as her bridesmaids, and her cousin, Miss Fritzie Farquhar, as her junior bridesmaid.

Her brother, Mr. Edwin Bateman Morris, jr., will act as best man and the ushers will be Mr. Chandler, Mr. Walton, Mr. Lawrence Eugene Duvall and Mr. Robert Allen.

Mr. Mills, who was graduated from the Naval Academy in Annapolis, resigned because of his sight, and is now with the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department. Miss Morris was graduated from Swarthmore College in 1933. After a wedding trip, Mr. Mills and his bride will return to Bethesda to reside in a new home.

Bride to Wear Mother's Gown

The wedding gown which belonged to her mother will be worn by Miss Mary Elizabeth Coon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron M. Coon, on August 29, when she will become the bride of Dr. Erwin Charles Stumm. Miss Coon will be one of the third generation of her family to be married in the parental home.

She will be given away by her father and will be attended by her sister, Miss Janet Coon. Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, brother-in-law of the prospective bridegroom, will act as best man. The Rev. Walter P. Plumbley, jr., will officiate. Mrs. Gertrude Dyre Persons will play the wedding music.

The bride-to-be attended George Washington University and is a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. Dr. Stumm received his A. B. and A. M. degrees from the same institution and his Ph. D. from Princeton University in June. He is a member of Theta Delta Chi and Sigma Xi.

Out-of-town guests will include Miss L. Byrd Wright, of Parlin, N. J.; Mrs. Edward Worth, of Media, Pa., and Mrs. Verde M. Whitmore, of New York City.

The ceremony will be performed at 8 p. m. It will be followed by a reception. Miss Marian Boyle, a sorority sister of Miss Coon; Miss Harriet Martinson, and Mrs. Robert Burke will assist.

Longworths Visit At Simms' Ranch

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Paulina Longworth, has arrived at Jacksons Hole, Wyo., where they are guests at the ranch of Mrs. Albert G. Simms, the former Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, of Illinois.

Mrs. Longworth and her daughter will remain with Mrs. Simms and her family at the ranch for several weeks, after which they will return to their home in Cincinnati for the autumn season.

For the past fortnight, Mrs. Longworth and her daughter have been in California staying first at Beverly Hills and then going to San Francisco for a few days after a leisurely motor trip up the California coast, stopping at Santa Barbara en route.

Kin Performs Postlethwaite, Milner Bridal

Wedding Held at Home of Bride's Mother Here Yesterday.

Dr. Clyde A. Milner, brother of the bridegroom, officiated yesterday at the marriage of Eloyse Sargent Postlethwaite to Mr. Charles Fremont Milner, which took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Harvey Owen Sargent.

The bride is the daughter of the late Dr. Harvey Owen Sargent, who was connected with the Agricultural Division of the Office of Education from its origin. Because of his recent death, the wedding was a quiet ceremony, witnessed only by members of the families.

Mr. Milner is the son of Mr. Fremont B. Milner, of Leesburg, Ohio, and for several years has made his home with his brother, Dr. Milner, who is president of Guilford College, in North Carolina.

The bride was attired in a tunic dress of dark green, with which she wore green antelope accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony there was an informal reception at which the bridal couple was assisted in receiving by the mother of the bride and Mrs. Clyde A. Milner, sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Milner is well known in Washington, where she has lived until the past year. She received her bachelor of science and master of science degrees from the University of Maryland and during the past year was head of the home economics department of Guilford College. Mr. Milner is an native of Leesburg, Ohio, where he received his early schooling. He attended Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., received his A. B. degree from Guilford College, and has done graduate work at the University of North Carolina. For the past three years, he has been a member of the faculty and coach of Sedge Garden High School, Kernersville, N. C. During the coming year he will teach in Central Junior High School in Greensboro. Mr. Milner is a member of the Schoolmasters Club.

Heat Control Makes Home Canning Sure

Any Oven Suitable For New Improvement Over Cold Pack.

By Dorothea Duncan.

A YOUNG BRIDE startled the older housewives in her Washington suburb by stating that she couldn't wait until the peaches were abundant and inexpensive enough for canning. None of the older women who had given up canning several years ago as a laborious and thankless job could understand the younger woman's enthusiasm for the task they avoided. So she invited them over to her new home one day last week after she had been to the market to buy her supply of peaches for canning. The new wrinkle in canning that the young bride learned at a cooking school and passed on to her older friends, sent every woman home intent upon trying out the idea. This week finds every one of them busy canning peaches or other favorite fruits.

The new canning idea is so simple and sure, and relieves so much of the usual work connected with the processing of fruits and vegetables, that every woman in Washington should know about it, so here it is. The old water bath that was used for processing fruits and vegetables packed by the cold pack method has been discarded, and its place has been taken by the modern oven which boasts controlled heat. Any oven, whether gas or electric, if it has automatic heat control, may be successfuly used in place of the water bath for processing fruits and vegetables.

Steam Eliminated.

Doesn't the new method sound simple? And it relieves all the messiness of a kitchen made steamy and unpleasant from the boiling of jars in an open vessel full of bubbling water.

Peaches, Bartlett pears, tomatoes and plums are abundantly displayed in the Washington markets at the present moment, and each of these fruits may be canned successfully by the oven method. Simply select your fruit by the usual method, being sure that it is ripe, firm and unbruised. Prepare for canning using the same preliminary steps you have always used for the cold pack method. Lest you have forgotten these steps, or if you are embarking upon your first canning venture, the preliminary steps are listed below.

If possible use the fruit the day it is picked, or if purchased in the city, the day of purchase. Wash, pare, and prepare the fruit, removing all bruises or decayed parts. Tomatoes and peaches should be blanched in boiling water until the skins will slip off. Plums may be pricked with a fork once or twice and canned unpeeled. Pears should be peeled. Blanched fruit should be immersed for a short time in cold water. This immersing should be just long enough to chill the surface of the fruit.

After the fruit is prepared, pack it in clean, tested jars to within half an inch of the top. Fill the fruit jars with boiling sirup, using a thin sirup for pears, a medium for plums and a thick for peaches. Plain boiling water is used for the tomatoes. Place a new rubber on each jar, adjust the cover of the jar, and partly seal it by adjusting only the upper clamp or by slightly screwing the lid.

Preheat Oven.

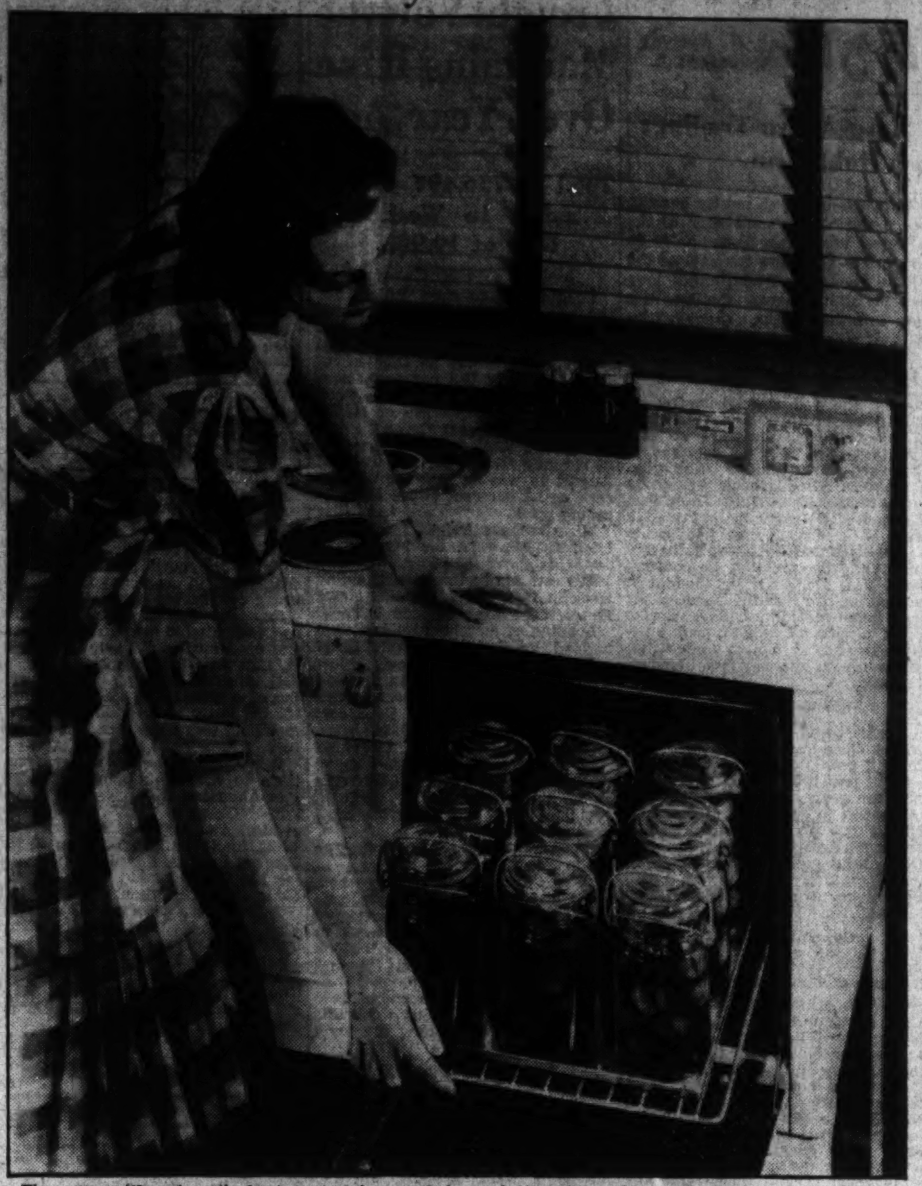
The oven should be preheated and the temperature control set to 275 degrees Fahrenheit. When the fruit is ready and the required oven temperature registered, set the jars of fruit on the oven rack about 1 inch apart. Plums, soft pears, and peaches should remain in the oven for 45 minutes, tomatoes for 65 minutes. Do not open the oven door during this time for there is no necessity for peeking. A shallow pan that covers the surface of the oven should be set on the bottom surface to catch any drops of liquid that may bubble from the jars.

After the jars have been in the oven for the required length of time, remove, completely seal and invert until cool, so that any signs of leakage may show before it is too late. Allow the jars to cool as rapidly as possible, but do not place them in a draft. When they are cool, wipe, mark and store in a cool place.

The harder fruits, Kieffer pears and pineapple, for example, should be pre-cooked for four to eight minutes in the sugar sirup before they are packed in jars and set in the oven.

Many women find that they prefer the oven method to the top-of-stove method for cooking relishes and conserves that need long cooking. These mixtures, catsup, chili sauce, apple butter and grape butter, for example, are mixed, placed in a preserving kettle and brought to a boil on the surface unit or burner. The preserving kettle is then slipped into a pre-heated 300 degrees Fahrenheit oven. The mixture is allowed to remain in the oven until of the desired consistency. This method of cooking such mixtures may take longer than when they are cooked by unit heat, but the advantage lies in the fact that they will not burn or stick, and such frequent or constant stirring is not necessary.

Peaches Canned by Controlled Oven Heat



The oven with automatic heat control is now being substituted for the water bath for canning fruits and vegetables. This new wrinkle in canning makes the processing of fruits and vegetables a simple task and one than can be accomplished swiftly and easily by the inexperienced beginner as well as the adept cook.

Visitors Copy Church Form Of Worship

By Margaret Wallace.

GOOD MANNERS in church are taken for granted. Yet in a large city such as Washington where congregations often include large numbers of visitors there are certain special problems that present themselves.

The question of behavior on a visit to a church of another faith often arises. Should a visitor follow the form of the church worship? Generally speaking, yes. He should follow the members of the congregation and rise and sit or kneel when they do.

One of the first tenets of good manners in one's own church or that of another faith is to arrive punctually Late arrivals should be very quiet and not discuss with each other or the usher where they are to sit. They should avoid leaving the church after the service.

It is not necessary to bow or greet friends in church. A smile for a person nearby is sufficient. A man when he is with women always walks down the aisle first. He stands at the pew until the women have taken their seat. If there is an usher the women follow the usher and the men follow the women. At the collection men and women make contributions separately.

Query—I am a stranger in Washington and have been going to a certain church for three Sundays. No one spoke to me, so I slipped away quietly. I would like to tell the rector how much I enjoy the service and his sermon. Do you think I could remain after church and do so? STRANGER.

Answer—Yes many ministers come among the members of their congregation to greet them after service. You could arrive early at the church and speak to an usher or a vestryman and tell them you are a stranger.

Query—I have a habit of coughing, which always seems to be more insistent when I am in church. Do you think I should leave the church in order not to disturb people? I always try to sit in the back. I hate to miss the service and the sermon.

Answer—You should leave quietly if your cough is one that would annoy others. There are many kinds of cough remedies that would stop the coughing for as short a period as the church service, unless the cough is an acute one.

Etiquette of Letters

Judy, after a marvelous week-end at the Norton's, is much too smooth a young modern to forget her bread-and-butter note!

She was a charming, tactful guest. Will she spoil that impression of poise and assurance? Not Judy! Her letter will reflect her personality, courtesy, and knowledge of good form.

"Dear Mrs. Norton," she begins. (Not "Dear Friend." That's too familiar.) "I am still feeling thrilled and happy over the delightful week-end I spent with you. I enjoyed the garden so much, and your friends who dropped in Sunday were charming."

She'll close her letter with "Sincerely yours," or "Cordially yours," and sign it "Judith Martin"—not with her nickname of Judy. Address and date at lower left, at end of letter. Blue-black ink on cream, pale blue, buff, or gay paper. Judy leaves the bright-colored paper for those who don't know any better!

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Who Works in Office With Two Women Who Dislike Each Other Wonders How She Can Keep From Being Drawn Into Their Feud.

During Miss Haworth's absence on vacation, her mail is being answered by proxy. Miss Haworth will return to her desk August 24.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your reply to the girl who wondered whether she should warn her boss that another person was scheming to be boss herself has inspired me to tell you my tale of woe. I work in an office where there are two other women. Both of these are good friends of mine, but they dislike each other heartily. Each one annoys me by trying to drag me into the feud that has been going on between them for months. I don't want to hurt the feelings of either, so what can I do?

DISTURBED.

State Your Position.

DEAR DISTURBED: When two women hate each other, friends can only declare themselves neutral and pray for peace! Tell each of these women that you prefer not to hear any criticism of the other because you wish to remain a friend of both. Once you frankly state your position, both women will cease to annoy you.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going steadily with a girl for two years. Two months ago, I thought I was being very fair to her when I told her I had met someone else whom I liked more and for this reason, I thought we had better not be engaged any longer. I told her, however, that I still thought a great deal of her and hoped we would always be friends. She said she hoped so, too. But after that, when I would meet her on the street or at a party, she didn't even speak to me and she has told all our mutual friends that she thinks I am "a heel." I don't understand her at all. I wanted us to remain friends. Isn't this possible when two persons have been engaged to each other?

WONDERING.

Possible But Not Probable.

DEAR WONDERING: I think it was Colton who philosophized as follows: "Friendship often ends in love, but love in friendship—never." I don't entirely agree with Colton, as I have seen a few divorced persons who were apparently very good friends, but I do believe friendships between former mates or former sweethearts are rare. In your case, I don't think anything you can do now will make your ex-fiancee a friend. If you are no longer in love with her, why are you so much concerned about her attitude toward you?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am distressed about my wife and don't know where to turn for help. We have been married a number of years and until the last six months never had trouble in getting along. Now my life is miserable. While I have never given her the least cause to doubt my faithfulness, she suspects me of being with some other woman each time I am out of her sight. Last Christmas I gave her a fur coat, which I knew she wanted very much and ever since, she has felt I made her this present to cover up a guilty conscience.

* * * *

Two nights ago I went to the corner drug store to get us some ice cream. I returned in a quarter of an hour and could not find her. After a tireless search I found her crouching in a corner of the closet, and when I tried to bring her out she called me names I had never heard pass her lips before. Yesterday, I learned that she has told two of our friends that she knows I am trying to get rid of her because I have always hated her. When I asked her why she had said this she denied it and became very angry. What shall I do?

DISTRESSED.

See a Psychiatrist.

DEAR DISTRESSED: Your wife is probably a psycopathic case. Take your problem to your family physician and ask him to direct you to a good psychiatrist.

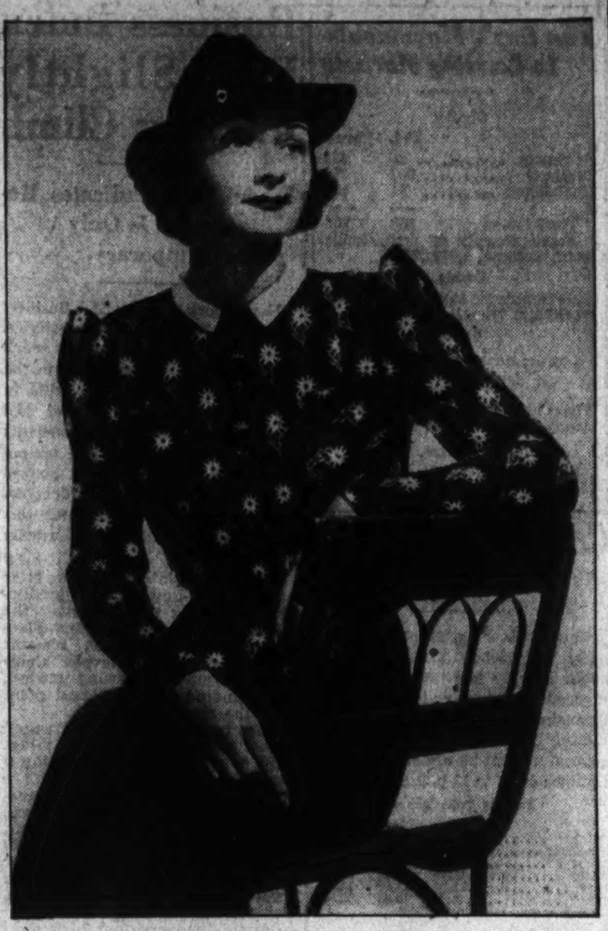
Posies Bloom on Knit Blouse



With woolens manipulated like silks this fall, you needn't sacrifice style trends even for the most casual frock. Zephy wool and angora are combined in the jacquard knit fabric of the chic two-piece affair shown above. The edelweiss flowers in yellow and white scattered over the wine-colored top are knitted into the fabric-skirt of solid color in deep wine. The wine felt hat crown repeats the peaked detail of the blouse shoulders; hand band and buttons are of leather.

Paris Dressmakers Turn to Old Fashions

Paris (AP).—Old fashions have been a striking development in the latest dressmakers' showings of new fashions.

Old-time basque dresses with wide, stiff bell skirts shared attention with such creations as a black taffeta evening dress highlighted with a glass muff and glass-stemmed white gardenias, and a green wool tailored dress fitted with a black fur bolero and a separate buttoned-on fur skirt.

All houses gave prominence to winter suits having a knee-length jacket, worn tight-waisted and widely flared.

The chemise frock was revived in some of the showings.

Voice Control Early Lesson For Children

Silent Play Impossible, but Useless Noises to Be Avoided.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE LIFEGUARDS on a crowded bathing beach recently made the complaint that the unnecessary screaming of the children in the water caused them a great deal of anxiety. They could never be sure whether the child was in trouble, and so had to keep answering false alarms on the chance that the cries were really calls for help.

It is true that children at play are bound to shout. It is impossible for happy, normal children to romp and play silently.

Most children like to attract attention and often scream unnecessarily loud and with a pretense of agony, just to start something. It does not occur to them that lifeguards and parents may at some time tire of answering false alarms and not turn up when they are really needed.

The story of the boy who called "Wolf!" once too often is apt to be repeated in some form again and again through life, and the sooner children learn it, the better. The time to begin training a child not to scream in the water or at play is when he is very young.

He can shout or call as often as he likes, but the minute he lets out an ear-piercing yell which brings mother and neighbors running, he shoud be reprimanded.

Wheat Higher On War Fears; Corn Declines

Germany and Italy Are Large Purchasers of European Crops.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—European war hazards received more attention among traders today than recently has been the case, and did much to lift wheat 1⅛ cents maximum. Late cables said Germany and Italy were large purchasers of wheat from Danubian countries, and emphasized that there had been no previous indications Germany would be a buyer.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ½-cent higher, September 113¼@113⅜, December 112⅝@112½, May 110½@110⅝; corn 1 cent to 2 cents down, September 112½@112⅝, December 97⅝@97¾, May 93@93⅛; oats ¼@½ off, December 44½@44⅝, and rye showing ½@⅝ setback, December 82⅜. Provisions results were 7 to 15 cents decline.

Advances of wheat values hoisting May wheat to 111¼, were in the face of pronounced fresh weakness of the corn market.

Business Index Dips Slightly In Long Climb

Trade News Indicates Recession Is Only Temporary.

New York, Aug. 21.—Business Week's index of business activity, which was 77.2 per cent last week compared with 78.5 per cent in the previous week, faltered a trifle in its persistent upward trend last week, but this week's developments suggest that the dip is but temporary. Steel mills are well booked with orders; deliveries are delayed. Talk of price increases later this year may whip additional business into line.

Ford is back into production after a week shut-down. Coal production is turning upward under the pressure of industrial demand. Electric power consumption remains close to record high levels. Commercial loans are pressing upward, now standing at the highest point since the close of 1933.

Farm buying power hasn't wilted as fast as crops. Here's how things were going in leading agricultural areas last week compared with a year ago, based on check transactions in Federal Reserve districts: Chicago, up 31 per cent; St. Louis, up 10 per cent; Minneapolis, up 29 per cent; Kansas City, up 12 per cent; Dallas, up 8 per cent, San Francisco, up 31 per cent; all United States, up 14 per cent.

Despite the persistent high temperatures in drought-stricken areas, the general outlook for business conditions continues to be exceptionally rosy. Higher prices for farm crops will offset reduced supplies, and in those localities where weather conditions have been more favorable, there is every chance that farmers will make a killing.

Stocks Drop Sharply in More Active Trading; Government Bonds Hold Firm.

New York, Aug. 21.—Financial markets were unsettled, mostly because of fancied fears and general indifference during the remainder of the dog day season that stretches between now and Labor Day. Sales in stocks increased to nearly 1,500,000 and prices were the weakest of the summer. Closing quotations were a little above the worst, and a long line of 1 to 3 points declines was shown for active shares. Commodities ment bonds held firm, but other issues followed stocks. Commodities were mixed. September wheat closed ⅛ of a cent higher at 113⅜ cents a bushel. Corn weakened.

The answer to the question of what is the matter with the stock market never can be given in one word or one sentence. At the moment the principal factor weighing on the speculative mind seems to be the bad state of affairs in Spain, with its implications of a general European war. Another drawback to speculative confidence and a cause of no little worry to investors is the apparent slackening of the current that until recently was running strongly against the New Deal. Finally, the business improvement was so pronounced in the first seven months of the year that speculators probably feel the chances favor a letdown for a while, without prejudice to furthere recovery later.

Liquidation.

Just how much selling of large holdings has been caused by the fighting in Spain is difficult to say. Most brokers report that no large scale liquidation is in progress, although recently foreigners have sold a little on balance. Admittedly there is nothing right now bearing on the market as a whole greatly to appeal to the speculative spirit. Most of the good news on corporations for the first half year is out; the last quarter and the remainder of the third quarter are unknown quantities. At the same time, this is a season in which large holders are inclined to "let their profits run" rather than to realize them.

Those who watch the so-called technical performance of the stock market have insisted that prices must rally strongly from this point or a considerable further decline must be anticipated. Reassurance on the matter of European troubles probably would touch off a good rally in stocks, for the market now rests on a good foundation of earnings, it has been relatively free from speculative excesses, high taxes deter profit taking and money hasn't any other place to go.

Worry on this side over the unsettled state of affairs abroad continued to be much greater than it is in Europe, if the condition of the foreign market is worth much as a guide. London markets were strong. In foreign exchange the franc held around the gold point, but little interest was shown in gold engagements. Sterling was firm.

Industries Suffer.

When selling was determined almost no stock group was spared. The decline in industrial prices was the sharpest for any single session since April 29. The Sun's averages show that all ground won by the railroad and industrial stocks since the second week of July has been canceled.

Among the stocks to fall from 2 to 7 points were Allied Chemical, Allis Chalmers, American Smelting, Santa Fe, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Standard Oil, Sears, Harvester, General Motors, duPont, Deere, Continental Oil, Consolidated Edison, Chrysler, Case and Bethlehem Steel.

Viewed as groups, the members of the chemical section dropped 1 to 7 points; farm implements and motors declined 1 to 4 points; rails, steels, silvers and coppers shot down 1 to 3 points, and losses of 1 to 2 points were taken in the oils, utilities, equipments, airplanes and amusements.

Odd Lots.

In commenting on a recapitalization plan for Cuban American Sugar, reference was made in this column yesterday to a common practice of receivership reorganization. It was not intended to intimate that Cuban American was in difficulty. The company is not in receivership, but is solvent and operating at a profit. . . . While the stock exchange authorities saw fit to fly the red flag yesterday in honor of visiting Soviet officials, some of the members are at least thankful they were not required to wear red shirts, the day being what it was. . . . In his book written to support the New Deal, Joseph P. Kennedy, who says he is "rated a man of wealth," points with pride to the fact that he is the father of nine children and that he couldn't be a New Dealer if he thought it would be bad for the kiddies. It now behooves John J. Raskob, also rated a man of wealth, and anti-New Dealer, to plough under that argument on the basis of his own 12 children.

Stock Movements.

Contrasting with the heavy fall in Allied Chemical, Wright Aero was lifted 7 points on large sales at the odd-lot post before profit-taking cut into the grain. Abraham & Strauss responded to an increased dividend with a rise of more than 3 points. American Agricultural Chemical and Dome Mines were popular. Among the leaders for volume were Steel, Bethlehem, Anaconda, General Motors and New York Central.

Guaranteed Bonds.

The trend of New York bank holdings of Government guaranteed securities, which has been downward for some time, dropped to the lowest since February on August 19, apparently because the bulk of the maturity of Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds which was paid off last Saturday was held here. New York banks in general always have preferred direct Treasury obligations to guaranteed ones. Just why this should be so is not clear, although at various times some authorities have raised academic questions as to the legality of the guaranty. Holdings of direct obligations by reporting New York City banks were little changed during the week, but are about $180,000,000 under the peak of July 1. One of the interesting features of the figures of New York City and Chicago member banks is a further gain in commercial and miscellaneous loans. In Chicago there was an increase of $10,000,000 this week, while the figures for New York City banks climbed $15,000,000 to a new high for several years.

Forgotten Men.

While a great corporation such as General Motors with around $300,000,000 in cash would appear to have nothing to fear for a long time (so far as needing money is concerned) from a business recession, that is far from true with a good many other motor companies. They have had a hard time in the depression and have little fat to call up on should another hard times period come. The new tax law on surplus earnings is admirably fitted to crush the little fellows, just as the NRA was designed to freeze enterprise and foster monopoly.

Bank Roll.

General Motors presents a balance sheet as of June 30 that shows a remarkable cash position. Cash in banks amounts to $290,000,000. In addition the corporation has $15,000,000 in Government and other marketable securities. The huge proportion of cash to readily marketable securities has been a striking feature of the corporation's reports for some time, but it never has been so sharp as now. General Motors seems to be in a position for weathering many a storm, even though it must from now on pay out virtually all its net income in dividends. Cash accumulations might still continue from the depreciation account. Time was when some corporations employed much of their otherwise idle cash in the call money market, but that is no longer possible.

July Cotton Spinning At 119.8% of Capacity

The cotton-spinning industry was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have operated during July at 119.8 per cent of capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 111.0 per cent during June this year, and 73.5 during July last year.

Gaming Raid On L St. Nets 13 Prisoners

Squad Bearing Hammers Descends on House in 2500 Block, N. W.

Place Was Operated by Elusive Warring Gang, Police Believe.

Striking swiftly in a surprise move against organized rackets, and apparently determined to rid the city of a powerful gambling ring, a special police raiding squad yesterday arrested 13 men in an L street gaming establishment reputedly operated by members of the elusive Warring gang.

Armed with warrants for the arrest of three suspects in a recent underworld shooting affray, the squad—led by Lieut. C. P. Cox—entered a barricaded apartment at 2512 L street northwest and allegedly trapped their prisoners in the midst of various gambling activities.

Convinced the place was operated by the much-sought Warring mob, members of the raiding party confiscated a large quantity of gaming and horse-race betting equipment. The establishment, they reported, was strongly barricaded behind steel doors and barred windows.

Warrings Reported Seen.

Two Warring brothers—Emmett and Leo—reputed gang chieftians, were seen in front of the apartment as the raiders approached, it was reported. They fled as the officers drove up.

"We are certain the Warring brothers operated the place," one raider declared. "We are going to get that gang if we have to tear down every joint in Washington."

Determined to smash their way into the place, if necessary, the raiders were armed with sledge hammers and battering rams. They were admitted to the apartment through a "mistake," however. Some one inside happened to oppen a door, and Detective Sergt. B. F. Day lunged into the room.

He was followed by Lieut. Cox, Detective Sergt. Howard Ogle and Detective Sergt. T. M. McVeary. One of the re-enforced steel doors was more than 4 inches thick, the police reported. Huge wooden planks were nailed against the windows from floor to ceiling.

Three Suspects Not Found.

The establishment occupied five rooms on the second floor. The raiders said it was a known "Warring hangout." Lieut. Cox said his search for three shooting suspects was fruitless, however.

With members of his special squad, Lieut. Cox has raided several reputed gaming places recently, searching for Jack Sweeney, Vernon ("Legs") Tate and Clarence ("Cocky") Ware, named in warrants charging them with assault with intent to kill.

The men are wanted in connection with the shooting of Joseph Edward O'Brian, wounded in a gangland dispute several weeks ago. Charles ("Rags") Warring already is under bond in connection with the affair.

Soon after the 13 prisoners had been taken to police headquarters, one who identified himself as Morgan George Thomas, 27, 2400 block Pennsylvania avenue northwest, reputedly admitted he operated the establishment.

He was released on $2,000 bail, charged with operating a gaming table.

Others Arrested.

George Arthur Bromley, 34, of the 1200 block Twenty-ninth street northwest; Jacob Joseph Orleans, 34, of the 5600 block Seventh street northwest; Alfred Richard Gray, 25, of the 300 block Seventh street southwest; Louis Frank Leech, 29, of the 900 block Twenty-sixth street northwest; Wallace Edward Abbott, 31, of the 2400 block E street northwest; Rufus J. Keeter, 47, of the 1000 block Thirty-first street northwest; Harry Rockford Caldwell, 52, of the 1300 block Wisconsin avenue northwest; William Collins, 38, of the 2400 block Pennsylvania avenue northwest; Edgar William Gibbs, 1000 block Twenty-third street northwest; Ross Fisher, 42, of the 1800 block Wisconsin avenue northwest; David Beecher, 40, of the 1700 block Columbia road northwest, and Edward Robert Tindell, 27, of the 3500 block O street northwest.

Of these, Beecher, Orleans, Tindall and Keeter were released after furnishing $100 bond each to guarantee their appearance as Government witnesses. The other men were released after their lawyers had sent the Detective Bureau a six-hour writ.

Earlier in the day, vice squad members arrested three men on lottery charges. The suspects were taken in a raid in the 1400 block Ninth street northwest. The police said the place was used for numbers betting. Those held on charges of operating a lottery were Henry A. Harvey, 38, of the 900 block O street northwest; Colonius Moore, 37, of the 1400 block Ninth street northwest, and Frank Louis McClain, 42, of the 800 block O street northwest.

Merchant Reports Trade Good Abroad

Retail merchandising abroad is making steady advances, H. H. Levi, vice president of the Hecht Co., said yesterday as he returned to Washington from a six-week tour of the Scandinavian countries. Mrs. Levi accompanied him.

The large department stores of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland work closely with one another to promote improved sales methods and working conditions, Mr. Levi said. They also keep in close touch with American department stores.

German People Desire Peace, Dr. Gray Says Following Trip

Chancellor Finds Nazi Nationalism Rampant, Anti-Semitism Still Flourishing, However; Czechoslovakia Fatalistic on Its Position.

"A great and growing will to peace" among the people of Nazi Germany was observed by Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University, who returned yesterday to Washington after a two-month visit to three countries of Central Europe.

Dr. Gray talked to Germans in all stations of life from waiters to cabinet ministers. He said that without exception they claimed Germany does not want war, if for no other reason because she well knows "how terrible war is."

However, Dr. Gray also felt that the Hitler regime has instilled in the German people a tremendous national spirit. Flags and banners were everywhere, and he observed countless parades in an unnumbered variety of uniforms. These manifestations, however, might be attributed as much to the fact that the Olympic games were in progress as to martial spirit, he felt.

The American University chancellor found the Nazi government had restored hope throughout the nation. "Everybody," he said, "is working;" and pointed to the fact that in six weeks in "amazingly clean" German cities he was only twice accosted by beggars. He noted, on the other hand, that the Reich had stabilized wages at "depression levels" and that since the cost of living is steadily rising, the people are not getting great fianancial return for their labors.

Admit Concentration Camps.

Dr. Gray said he found the Nazis perfectly ready to admit existence of concentration camps, and content merely to claim they are being decreased in numbers. He was not, however, invited to visit one. He felt atrocities were being committed in Germany but doubted that a visitor would ever see one being perpetrated.

"The most sinister thing about the Jewish situation is," Dr. Gray pointed out, "that the subject is absolutely never mentioned." He did, however, observe anti-Semitic posters on the billboards of Frankfort; and he had no difficulty in obtaining copies of Der Sturm, the Jew-baiting personal paper of Julius Streicher, sadistic Nazi boss of Nuremberg.

While Dr. Gray feels that it is still possible to obtain a liberal education in Germany, he also says educators of that nation are extremely careful about what they have to say. He observed that this was inevitable, however, and pointed to the fact that "any dictatorial regime will safeguard its future by dominating education."

Emergency Policies.

It was his opinion that almost all the Nazi policies are "expedients to meet an emergency," and that the present regime may have saved the Reich from going "the way of present-day Spain." In support of this theory he pointed to the widespread despondency and discouragement which existed in republican Germany in 1930.

Dr. Gray found numerous peace organizations springing up throughout Hitler's totalitarian state, and was very favorably impressed by the hospitality and will to please the visitor, which was displayed everywhere in Germany.

During his visit to Czechoslovakia, which was extremely hard hit by the depression, Dr. Gray observed marked improvement in economic conditions and hope for the future. The Czechs, he said, were inclined to be calm and fatalistic about their unfortunate military position and Germany's stated policy of an ultimate military drive eastward. The national attitude could be summed up in one Czech's observation to him that "for more than 900 years we have been facing drives by someone in one direction or another, and we are getting used to it."

Peace Groups Numerous.

As in Germany, Dr. Gray was greatly impressed by the surprising rise of popular organizations in Czechoslovakia working to perpetuate peace in Europe.

Nevertheless, the republic continues to flourish, and Dr. Gray saw no signs of dictatorship or oppresion.

Three members of the cabinet are of German blood and represent the 3,500,000 German citizens of Czechoslovakia, most of whom dwell in eastern Silesia, which the republic obtained from the Reich by the Treaty of Versailles. These Germans are not eager to be returned to the control of the Nazi state, Mr. Gray thinks. Popular feeling about the situation, he felt, could be summed up in the laconic observation of a Czech, "If Germany's coming, then she's coming."

Austria suffers severely from chronic economic maladjustment; but Vienna seemed to him much like "the gay Vienna of old." He saw, as in prewar days, "poverty and gayety, beggars and beautifully dressed people."

Two Capital Women Arrested By Nazis in Currency Dispute

Allegedly Violated Law in Taking Marks Back to Germany.

Two Washington women were under technical detention in Passau on the Austrian-Bavarian frontier yesterday pending clarification of an apparent misunderstanding of complicated currency restrictions, a United Press dispatch from Berlin said last night.

Mrs. Georgette Howard, Sulgrave lecturer, 1872 Newton street northwest, and her daughter, Jean, 19, were arrested Thursday at Passau and charged with smuggling marks into Germany.

The women were taken immediately to the Passau jail and questioned. They were detained at a hotel all night.

"I never was so frightened in all my life," Mrs. Howard told the United Press.

"The customs officer was very rude. He took my passport and my letters from State Secretary Hull and John W. Davis, although I told him in English that these would help me. He also confiscated my money."

It was understood Mrs. Howard and her daughter might be able to proceed to Munich soon, as the Berlin embassy and United States consulate there were co-operating in an effort to clarify the case.

Mrs. Howard, dispatches said, bought German marks in Berlin during the Olympics. Ignorant of currency restrictions, she took them to Austria, according to the United Press. Coming back to Germany she brought the same marks, amounting to $192, with her. This is against currency regulations.

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. GEORGETTE HOWARD.

Miss Mildred Ross, sister of Mrs. Howard, who lives with her at the Newton street address, was informed of their plight yesterday. She was amazed that they had been detained and said she had received a letter from her sister which told how few marks she could buy.

A year ago, Miss Ross said, her sister bought marks at the German Embassy here before going abroad.

Mrs. Howard and Jean, who is a junior at the Connecticut College for Women at New London, were gathering material for this season's lectures. They left Washington July 11 and were to have returned September 17. They already had toured the British Isles.

$100-an-Acre Rise Is Asked In Park Fund

5,600 Acres Involved in Increase Sought for Maintenance.

Fire Department Seeks 8-Hour Shifts; Police Request Jump.

The total requested by the two departments is $7,752,815 as against 1937 appropriations of $6,165,700, or a jump of 25 per cent.

The Fire Department is responsible for the largest share of the estimated increase, however, and this is because Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom proposed placing all firemen on an 8-hour day, with three shifts instead of on a two-platoon system as at present. This change would cost the District $1,077,660. An additional 538 men would be needed, including a deputy chief, seven battalion chiefs, 15 sergeants and 505 privates.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, requested 131 men and officers and funds to rehabilitate the old Second Precinct Station, now used as the House of Detention.

Discussing the need for more maintenance funds, the National Capital Parks Office told the Commissioners:

"During the past seven years, appropriations for maintenance purposes have gradually decreased from $158 per acre to $129 per acre for the present fiscal year. This sharp decline in maintenance funds has been further aggravated by a steady increase in material costs and fixed charges.

Acreage Increases.

"Land purchases and acquisitions during the past seven years have increased the park acreage approximately 19 per cent, or 1,067 acres. As a result of the great increase in acreage the enormous amount of improvements made during this period which must be maintained and the gradual decrease in maintenance funds per acre, the National Capital Parks office has been severely handicapped in its efforts to maintain the parks in a satisfactory condition.

"The increased acreage during the past several years has been confined almost entirely to the residential districts, and considerable pressure is exerted from time to time by citizens' associations for the improvement of these new areas which detract from the general appearance of the neighborhood and are not in keeping with other municipal improvements."

Seventy-four employes, at a cost of $97,320, are asked to provide this extra maintenance. Another $11,700 is included in the estimates for ten additional employes in the sports and recreation division and $13,480 for seven more employes in the engineering division.

An increase from $373,500 to $483,026 is proposed in the general expenses fund for the parks, among other things, to provide additional per diem personnel so that the outdoor recreational and sports programs may be enlarged, and to provide additional traffic signals and street lights.

New Ellipse Lights.

Some of the lights would go around the Ellipse and some in the lower section of Meridian Hill Park. Traffic lights are proposed for intersections on Constitution avenue.

An increase of $25,116 for park police, to hire 12 privates and 2 sergeants, is included in the estimates because of the increasing task of policing the expanding park system.

Justifying the request, the parks office said:

"Inadequate police supervision has resulted in a large amount of prysical damage from abuse and vandalism, and petty thievery which cannot be prevented unless additional personnel is provided."

The police also ask $5,500 to exchange 20 motorcycles and three cruisers for new equipment.

The only increases asked by the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission are $5,250 for added personnel, including restoration of the job of director of planning, and $10,0000 to purchase a small area around each boundary stone separating Maryland and the District.

For the continued payment on the one-time $16,000,000 Crampton act park purchase the commission asks $300,000. Through this year the District has paid $4,131,211.94 on the debt.

The Fire Department's estimate, beyond the $1,077,660 for increased personnel, was small. No new sites or buildings were proposed. Equipment asked includes one new aerial ladder truck, five combination hose wagons, three pumping engines and three automobiles for battalion chiefs. All are for replacement of obsolete apparatus.

Police Chief Brown's estimate of 131 additional policemen includes 6 officers and 125 privates. Of the latter, 90 would be patrolmen, 25 for motorcycle service and 10 would be policewomen.

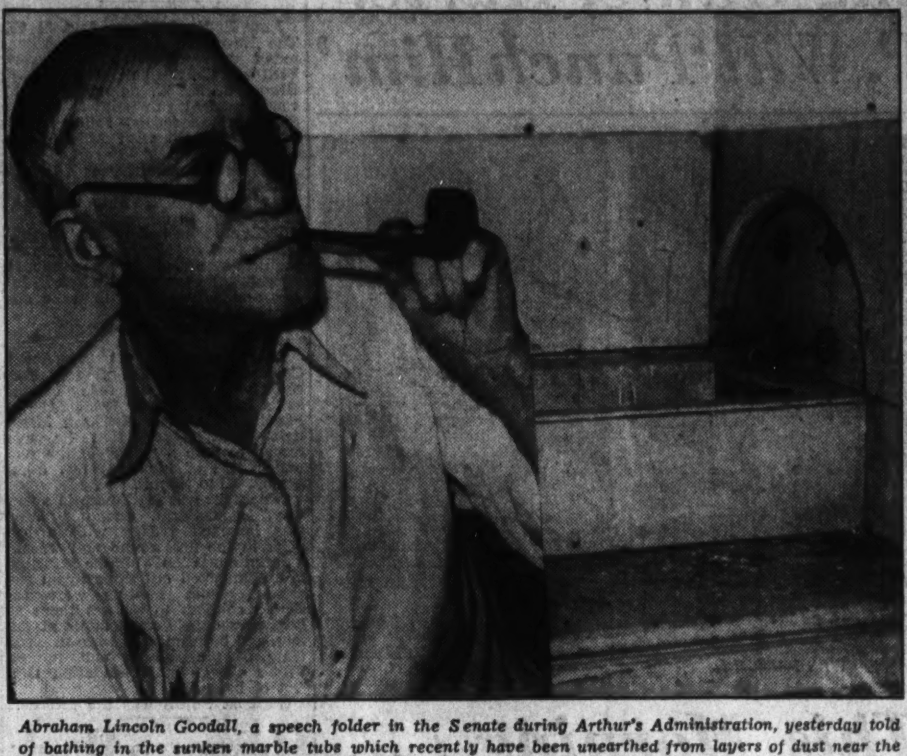
He also asks for 25 new motorcycles with sidecars, and for replacement of obsolete equipment with 35 motorcycles, 20 sidecars, 29 patrol cars, 1 cruiser and 4 patrol wagons.

Revival of mounted police, an unrealized dream of Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, the late District Commissioner, would be effected if an estimate for six horses with trappings passes muster with the Budget Bureau and Congress. The mounted policemen would be used in traffic direction work at busy intersections.

An item of $2,000 for tear gas is included in the police estimates. Declaring that the present supply is two years old, Maj. Brown comments:

"Gas is an effective weapon in handling mobs, crazy people, riots, etc., and it is felt that this department should have an adequate and effective supply on hand at all times."

Mystery of "Forgotten Bathtub" Solved



Abraham Lincoln Goodall, a speech folder in the Senate during Arthur's Administration, yesterday told of bathing in the sunken marble tubs which recently have been unearthed from layers of dust near the underground tunnels beneath the Senate Chamber.

Officials Back Proposed Pool In High School

Hope that the Southwest section of the city eventually will have a swimming pool appeared yesterday as school, recreational and citizens' association officials expressed the belief that a swimming pool in the proposed new Jefferson junior high school might solve the waterfront aquatic problem.

Southwest citizens hitherto have wanted a pool at Hoover Playground. This site, however, has not been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. J. M. Schaffer, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, said last night a pool in the proposed new school might might be of most value to waterfront children, especially since it could be used all year round.

School officials, it is understood, are planning to make a determined bid for the Jefferson School this year. Included in the estimates recently submitted to the Commissioners by the Board of Education, was a $165,000 item for purchase of land for the school site.

Attempts have been made for over a decade to obtain land for the site. So far, however, all attempts have been balked by arguments over price.

At present an appropriation of $200,000 is available for construction of the school building after necessary land is purchased.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle and Jere J. Crane, of the Board of Education, both agreed last night the $165,000 for land purchase was one of the most important on the school budget. Both also said they believed a swimming pool in the Southwest to be a vital need.

Lewis R. Barrett, co-ordinator of recreation for the District, was another out for a pool at the Jefferson location.

"To my mind," he said, "this would provide the ideal solution to the problem."

Senators Bathed in Roman Tubs Recently Dug Up, Says 1880 Aid

He Once Splashed in Marble Tubs Himself, Says Abraham Lincoln Goodall, Speech-Folder for Upper House in Arthur's Term.

Light was thrown on the Senate bathtub mystery yesterday by 71-year-old Abraham Lincoln Goodall.

While Arthur E. Cook, supervising engineer of the Capitol, and David Lynn, Capitol architect, were still wondering whether Senators ever used the two old, sunken marble tubs found last Monday deep beneath the Senate Chamber, Goodall announced that not only did Senators bathe in them but that he, too, once had splashed around in the pool-like affairs.

"I don't know when they were built but I do know that they were in use when I was a speech folder in the Senate folding room," Goodall said yesterday at his home, 504 Maryland avenue southwest.

His service as speech folder was from 1880 to 1885, during the Presidency of Chester A. Arthur.

"I was only a boy at the time," he recalled, "and I was mighty pleased when the president pro tem of the Senate, David Davis, gave me a pass to the baths. We had to have a card to get in. Two colored men were on guard, I remember."

"That was before the bathtub had come into general use," he explained, "and those sunken marble ones seemed pretty fine. We had both hot and cold water, though I declare I don't know where the hot came from, unless it was heated in the boiler room."

When the baths, located in a small room off one of the underground tunnels beneath the Senate Chamber, were in use, the Senate restaurant was only a few yards away, Goodall said.

The Romanesque tubs were discovered by laborers. In need of a thorough scrubbing, they were coated with dust and their fancy brass spigots were no longer attached to water pipes.

Capital Woman Dies, 2 Injured In Maine Crash

One Washington woman was killed and her two companions—her sister and niece—were injured yesterday when their automobile collided with a truck near Saco, Me., it was learned here last night.

Miss Ellen Richards, 58, of 1610 Webster street northwest, was crushed to death when the truck and trailer careened against their automobile on the Boston-Portland highway.

Catherine Richards, her niece, suffered a fractured right shoulder, and Mrs. Mary Keith, 59, the sister, suffered a fractured ankle. Miss Richards lives at 1229 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Mrs. Keith lived with her sister at the Webster street address.

The injured were taken to a Biddeford hospital.

Miss Richards and Mrs. Keith are sisters of Harry Richards, a navy yard machinist. Miss Catherine Richards is his daughter.

Veteran Jailed 30 Days In Tidal Basin Episode

A swim in the Tidal Basin, topped off with a roundhouse swing at a park policeman, cost Carl Pelton 30 days of freedom when he was haled into Police Court yesterday.

Pelton, a war veteran from Mountain Home, Tenn., who harangued a large crowd Thursday as he swam and floated in the park basin, got ten days on each of three charges—swimming in a prohibited area, drunkenness, and assault. Private Oren Spears was the policeman he struck.

Experts Plan Session Here On Traffic

Unfiorm Regulations to Be Sought Over U. S. by Sub-Committee.

Driver's License Laws in 10 States Lacking Them Will Be Urged.

Experts from every State in the Nation will meet in Washington next month to untangle the Nation's traffic problems.

They intend to achieve this by working out a program of uniform regulations over the country. The uniform traffic regulations subcommittee of the Commerce Department's Accident Prevention Conference has called the meeting for September 28 and 29.

"Analysis will be made of the requirements of each State to bring present legislation into conformity with the uniform vehicle code, drafted over a period of years by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety," a statement said.

License Laws Sought.

"Emphasis will be laid particularly on obtaining the passage of driver's license laws in the 10 States which do not now have them. These States are Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Missouri, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Wyoming."

At a meeting of the subcommittee yesterday the organization represented pledged their support to the general movement and particularly to the driver's license law. This law has been opposed in the past in some sections, the announcement said, by automotive and farm organization groups.

On the sub-committee are two Washingtonians—Col. A. B. Barber, director of transportation, United States Chamber of Commerce, and J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, with headquarters in the Transportation Building here.

Representatives in Group.

Representative Emmet O'Neal, of Kentucky, is chairman of the subcommittee. The other representative from Congress in the group is Mrs. Edith Rogers, of Massachusetts.

The sub-committee also voted to seek adoption of the uniform vehicle code in its entirey by the various States. More constructive legislation, its members decided, can be obtained by submitting the entire code than by "attempting to pass it piece-meal."

In the code are uniform signals, compulsory inspection, speed limitations, use of safety glass, penalties for intoxicated drivers, regulations for approaching railroad crossings and passing street cars, limitation of width of buses and trucks and pedestrian control.

Wes Ferrell Fined $1,000, Indefinitely Suspended by Cronin

Pilot Says Star Is Through For Leaving Game; Hurler 'Amazed', Will 'Punch Him'

Manager's Charge That Player Quit Yankee Game Is Denied.

Penalty Is Next Biggest Ever Assessed in Baseball History.

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 21.—Wesley Ferrell, temperamental pitching ace of the Boston Red Sox, was indefinitely suspended and fined $1,000 today by Manager Joe Cronin for walking out of the box of his own accord during a Yankee rally in the sixth inning of the New York-Boston game.

After announcing the drastic action, Cronin said he was ordering Ferrell to return to Boston and stated flatly that the pitcher had worked in his last game for the Red Sox.

"I don't care if I never see Ferrell again," said Cronin. "I don't care whether he obeys orders and goes back to Boston, goes home to North Carolina or the Fiji Islands. I'm through with him."

Ferrell 'Amazed.'

Ferrell, at his room at the Red Sox hotel, was "amazed" when he learned of Cronin's action. He left Yankee Stadium before the rest of the Boston players, and was reading when the telephone rang.

"Is that so?" he said, "well, that isn't the end of this. I'm going to punch Cronin in the jaw as soon as I can find him. I don't know whether I'll go back to Boston or not. I didn't walk out of the box at all. Cronin ordered me out."

Ferrell denied that he had previously walked out of a game in Boston without Cronin's permission.

"In the Boston game I asked Cronin if I could leave the game and he said I could."

Fades Suddenly.

In today's game the Yankees and Red Sox were tied, 1 to 1, when New York came to bat in the sixth. Ferrell was pitching well, having allowed only five hits, struck out five men and walked three. After retiring Joe DiMaggio, Ferrell collapsed. He walked Gehrig and then Dickey singled, sending the runner to third. Powell beat out a hit to deep short and Gehrig scored. Lazzeri walked, filling the bases. Monte Pearson, Yankee pitcher, then singled to center, scoring Dickey and Powell. After Pearson's hit, Ferrell walked off the mound and went through the Yankee dugout to the Red Sox dressing room.

Jack Russell was called out of the bull pen and took Ferrell's place. He held the Yanks runless the rest of the game, but the 3 runs made off Ferrell were enough to give New York a 4-to-1 victory.

Second Largest Fine.

The fine against Ferrell is one of the largest any manager ever slapped on a player, with one exception—the $5,000 the late Miller Huggins fined Babe Ruth for breaking training rules in 1925.

Ferrell, regarded as one of the outstanding right-hand pitchers in the majors, acquired a reputation as a "bad actor" during his six years with Cleveland. The trouble started in 1933, when Ferrell was bothered with a sore arm. He finally was suspended by the Indians, and was under suspension at the time they traded him to the Red Sox.

The Red Sox gave Pitcher Bob Weiland, Outfielder Bob Seeds and cash for Ferrell and Outfielder Dick Porter. As soon as he joined the Red Sox he became a consistent winner again. He won 14 games

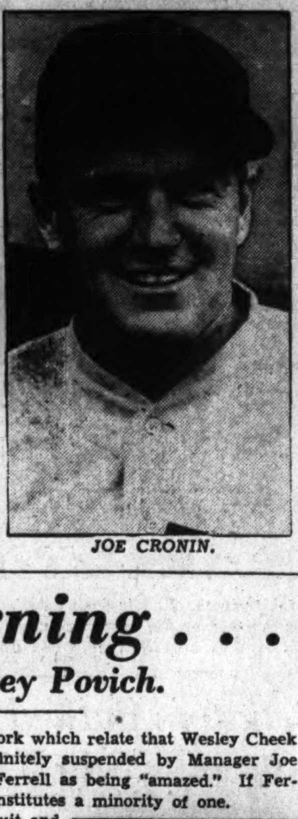
WES FERRELL.

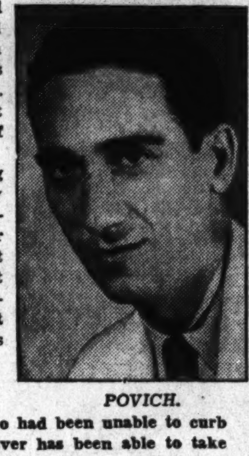


JOE CRONIN.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

The news dispatches from New York which relate that Wesley Cheek Ferrell was fined $1,000 and indefinitely suspended by Manager Joe Cronin yesterday, also quote Mr. Ferrell as being "amazed." If Ferrell is, indeed, amazed, then he constitutes a minority of one.



POVICH.

Because fans throughout the circuit and all of Cronin's rival managers for several weeks had anticipated the day when Cronin would crack down on the Red Sox's mean-tempered maverick of the mound. Ferrell had been asking for it with great persistence and even the patience of Cronin was nearing its end.

When Ferrell walked off the pitching mound in the midst of a Yankee rally yesterday without waiting for the customary formal invitation of Manager Cronin, it was not his first offense in that direction. As recently as last Sunday at Boston he walked out of the box uninvited when a double by Cecil Travis sent three Washington runs clattering across the plate.

The pitcher who had been a storm center with the Cleveland club and who had been unable to curb his temperament with the Red Sox never has been able to take adversity in stride, but his actions were making a full-fledged sucker out of Cronin, who was supposed to be boss of the team.

Except to those who know Cronin as an extremely patient and forgiving individual, the wonder is that Cronin did not crack down on Ferrell weeks ago. Certainly the Red Sox manager was in a better spot than was Manager Roger Peckinpaugh at Cleveland back in 1933 when Ferrell openly led a revolt.

It was the Ferrell-Luke Sewell faction which ultimately forced the Cleveland owners to release Peckinpaugh as manager, but in striking contrast, Cronin is firmly in the saddle at Boston. His iron-clad five year contract still has three years to run and Cronin is backed at Boston by a sympathetic club owner.

He really isn't a bad guy, this Ferrell—just temperamental. His zeal to win is exceeded by that of no other player in the big leagues but he has never learned to temper it with reason.

When he failed to win a place on the 1936 American League all-star team as did a hundred and fifty other big leaguers, Ferrell took it sorely to heart. Despite the fact that he lived only five minutes' walk from Braves Field, the scene of the game, he refused to attend it, declaring, "If I'm not good enough to play with those guys then damned if I'm gonna watch 'em.

Ferrell's fierce desire to win does not confine itself to the baseball field. On the golf course a $10 No. 1 wood represents only something to be shattered across the nearest tree when Ferrell misses a shot. He probably holds all international records for club-heaving, at which he gets greater distance than on many of his drives.

It was down in Florida before the 1936 training season began that Ferrell probably gave his greatest display of temperament. He was playing with Paul Waner, of the Pirates, and on the last tee still had a chance to square the match and save his $4 bet.

Ferrell addressed his ball, swung, and in great dismay saw it skid off toward the rough only a dozen feet from the tee.

Whereupon Mr. Ferrell heaved his club after the ball, sat down on the tee and banged his head a half-dozen times against the iron tee-markers.

Then, suddenly bethinking himself, he desisted. Without pausing to rub his head, he looked up at Waner and said: "Say, Paul, if I kill myself, you'll find enough money to pay that bet in my right-hand hip pocket."

With that, he calmly lay down on the tee once more and resumed his head-banging exhibition against the iron marker.

Some folks call it being temperamental. Others say its 98 per cent temper and 2 per cent mental.

Ferrell's future in baseball is now extremely in doubt. If Joe Cronin is serious when he says that he hopes never to see Ferrell again, then Ferrell's days in a Red Sox uniform are surely numbered because Cronin has the full backing of Owner Tom Yawkey.

The Red Sox's attempts to trade Ferrell may meet with no immediate success, if any. Despite the fact that the North Carolinian is still a valuable baseball chattel whose pitching ability would be welcomed on any team in the league, other big league managers will doubtless display no alacrity in taking him on.

He has already plagued the managerial life of the three men for whom he has worked in the big leagues—Peckinpaugh, Bucky Harris and Cronin—and managers not so secure in their posts as Cronin are in no position to invite trouble from a chronic disturber. When Ferrell walked off the mound at Yankee Stadium yesterday, he may have been walking right out of the American League.

Berwanger Is Caught Speeding and Fined $10

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Jay Berwanger, 22, of Dubuque, Iowa, former University of Chicago football star, was fined $9 and $1 costs today for driving 51 miles an hour on his way to Dyche Stadium to practice for the All-Americans-Detroit Lions football game here September 1.

"What are the prospects of your team?" asked the judge, Frank M. Padden, of Berwanger, a member of the Detroit professional team.

"Most of the players are in good shape and our chances look pretty good," the player replied, handing $10 to the court clerk.

Detroiter Enters Final Of Public Parks Tennis

St. Louis, Aug. 21 (AP).—M. J. "Mike" McClaney, of New Orleans strained a back muscle and then defaulted, sending stolid Carl Fischer, of Detroit, into the final round of the men's singles in the National Public Parks tennis tournament today.

Fischer will meet Louis Wetherell, of Los Angeles, who advanced to the finals after a tough five-set battle with Grim MacNeill Smith, of East St. Louis, Ill.

Gun Put in Ribs, So He 'Took Dive,' Says Villa, Boxer

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 21 (AP). The New Bedford Standard-Times today quotes Pancho Villa, New Bedford lightweight, defeated in Brooklyn, N. Y., as declaring he was forced at gun point to take "a dive" in the second round of his fight last night with Aldo Spoldi, of Italy.

The newspaper declares Villa told it that before he entered the ring he was told to "go into the tank" but refused to do so.

Villa said he had Spodi "groggy" in the first round when, during the minute intervnal for rest, a man approached him, poked a gun in his ribs and advised him to "take one on the chin."

Villa said he promptly did.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Sergt. Cowan, director of boxing at Fort Hamilton Army Post, today classed as "a lot of baloney" the charge of Pancho Villa, New Bedford, Mass., lightweight boxer, that he was forced to take a "dive" in the second round of his fight last night against Aldo Spoldi.

"The fight was legitimate in every way," said Sergt. Cowan. "Villa was knocked groggy with a left hook in the first round and was in a dazed condition when he returned to get knocked out squarely in the second. Both fighters were assigned soldiers to protect them as is always done during fights at the fort, and both fighters were in clear view of the referee and judges. Villa's charge of intimidation is a "lot of baloney."

Gunboat Smith was the referee.

Herman Back In Line-up Of Reds

Landis Orders Return, No Bonus Ruling Until Close of Season.

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Babe Herman, who walked out on the Ciincinnati Reds last Tuesday in a huff over payment of a bonus, returned to his leftfield spot in the line-up today after ordered by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis to report back to the club immediately.

His only comment on swinging back into action was, "I'm not saying anything." Herman reported in time to start the first game in the current series with the Chicago Cubs.

The ruling was made after a conference between Landis, Herman and two officials of the Reds—Charley Dressen, the manager, and Larry MacPhail, business manager.

If at the end of the season the difficulty over the bonus has not been adjusted, Landis instructed Herman, the player is to report back to the commissioner for settlement.

Landis said he would take no action on payment of the bonus at this time other than to order Herman to return to the club. As the Reds were to open a series with Chicago's Cubs here today Herman was expected to be in uniform by game time.

Cubs in 7-2 Victory Over Reds

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Babe Herman ended his walkout and returned to the Cincinnati Reds today, but it made no difference to the Cubs, as they downed the Reds, 7 to 2, putting the game on ice with a six-run uprising in the fifth inning.

A homecoming day crowd of 20,000 saw Bill Lee limit the Reds to eight hits and lead the Cubs at bat with a homer and a single. Ival Goodman belted a round-tripper—his fourteenth of the season—for the Reds.

Herman played the entire game at his leftfield position. He batted in one of the Red runs with a single in the fifth.

A's Win, 3-2; Nats Fail Newsom

Star Hurler Robbed of 2-1 Victory by Poor Support of Mates.

Lisenbee Hurls Shutout Ball After Yielding 2 Runs in 1st Frame.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—Ancient Horace Lisenbee, who banged around in the minor leagues for ten years, was banged around to no great extent by the Nats this afternoon, and, such being the case, he turned in a 3-to-2 victory for the Athletics.

But the Nats were not without a victim, just the same. Their victim, unhappily, however, was Buck Newsom, whose pitching they sadly betrayed and spoiled for the Big Breeze what should have been a winning 2-to-1 effort.

One of the three Athletics' runs was an outright gift by Johnny Stone, who contributed an unpardonable muff of a ground ball in the fourth inning. And those other two Philadelphia runs were slightly tainted, what with Ben Chapman gambling needlessly on a line-drive single and permitting it to go for a triple.

It was a galling defeat for the Nats, who envisioned a soft touch in Lisenbee, a guy who had been released by Nashville for incompetency. They didn't get a run off Lisenbee after the first inning, and after the fourth they didn't even get a hit off him.

In fact, only two Nats reached base after the fourth inning—Kuhel, who was the beneficiary of Finney's three-base muff in the fifth, and Chapman, who walked in the seventh. Two were out on each occasion.

Newsom was in rare fettle, striking out eight Mackmen, compared to the lone strikeout of Lisenbee, but he couldn't surmount his shoddy defense. Like Lisenbee, he pitched a seven-hit game.

Nothing occurred in the first inning to intimate that the Nats would't win the ball game and force Lisenbee's exit in a hurry. With two out, Joe Kuhel rapped a double to right field, and Johnny Stone deposited one in the same spot to score him. Carl Reynolds singled to left, and the Nats had their 2-0 lead.

Half of their margin vanished in the fourth when the A's came up with the gift run Stone presented 'em, one was out when Johnson singled to left and galloped all the way to third when Stone permitted the ball to get away from him for a two-base error. A long fly by Higgins brought Johnson home.

Thus the game wore into the sixth with the figures standing at 2-1. Three of the seven hits the A's made off Newson they made in that inning. Moses singled through the box and was forced by Stone for the first out. But when Ben Chapman attempted to make a shoestring catch of Johnson's line drive to center and missed, it went as a triple scoring Dean.

At this point Higgins dashed a single to center and the A's had a 3-2 lead and the ball game.

Grant Is Upset By Parker at Newport

By the United Press.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 21.—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., was upset in the semi-finals of the Newport Casino tennis championships by Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., today in a five-set battle that had the spectators gasping.

The Georgia "giant killer," seeded No. 2, was a big favorite to defeat the third seeded player, but Parker turned on the heat to win the first two sets, loafed through the next two which Grant won, then had enough left to conquer the "mighty mite" in the deciding one. The score was 7—5, 6—1, 3—6, 0—6, 6—4.

Parker was joined in the finals by Bobby Riggs, of California, who swept to an easy, straight set victory over his doubles partner, Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3.

The Nation's premier doubles combination, Donald Dudge and Gene Mako, were given a stout battle in their semi-final doubles match by Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, and Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, before winning, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2. Final opponents of Dudge and Mako will be Parker and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., who coasted to a 6—2, 6—2, 6—4 victory over Riggs and Sabin.

Fight Off Until 1937; Max Schmeling Sails

MAX SCHMELING.

German and Braddock Sign for Title Go; Louis Seeks Action.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 21.—The heavyweight championship fight between James J. Braddock and Germany's Max Schmeling probably will be held next June instead of next month, as originally scheduled.

The New York State Athletic Commission today gave Braddock three weeks to be cured of an arthritis attack, but the promoters, disregarding the possibility of staging the bout this year, went ahead with the arrangements for holding the bout next summer.

Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, announced a few hours after the commission meeting that he had signed for Braddock to meet the conqueror of Joe Louis at the Madison Square Garden Bowl either June 3 or June 10, 1937. Madison Square Garden officials, copromoters of the bout with Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club, then got Schmeling's signature on a contract before his departure for Germany.

That business was accomplished in short order and the Garden announced the postponement until June would become official when the contracts are filed with the commission next Monday.

After hearing the report of Dr. Fred Albee, bone specialist, who examined the champion Wednesday, the commission went into executive session, then announced Braddock would begin treatments at once and report back to the commission September 15 for another examination.

Schmeling to Go Home.

Visibly upset and disappointed, Schmeling had lost no time getting back to Germany. He booked passage on the Bremen, sailing at midnight.

The postponement was not unexpected to Max, but he was apprehensive lest things be maneuvered around so that Louis gets a match with Braddock before Schmeling gets his chance.

He cheered up noticeably when Commissioner Bill Brown assured him that Braddock will not be permitted to box anybody in New York State until he goes through with the Schmeling match, and when the June agreement was signed.

Schmeling, who flew to New York on the airship Hindenburg two weeks ago, had selected Speculator, N. Y., as his training camp and was preparing to begin training when the announcement of Braddock's injury exploded the arrangements.

Bout With Louis Flops.

Promoter Mike Jacobs made a last-minute effort to have Schmeling change his mind and sign for a September return bout with Louis, but the Teuton was obdurate.

Neither Madison Square Garden, nor the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, the joint promoters, would consider staging a heavyweight title match indoors.

Dr. Albee's report showed Braddock to be suffering from subacute arthritis in both elbows and in his left hand. He said the champ will have to be treated regularly for several weeks, and advised that he not undertake the strenuous training grind necessary for a fight in the next month or so.

The bone specialist was named by the commission to examine Braddock, after eight others, including Jimmy's own physicians and several members of the commission staff, had disagreed on the seriousness of a small growth in the champ's left hand.

Giants Subdue Bees for 10th In Row, 3-2

Victory Is 30th in Last 35 Games, Keeps Them on Heels of Cards.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 21.—The fast-traveling New York Giants pulled a 3-to-2 decision out of the fire today for their tenth straight victory, as they turned back the Bees' ninth-inning rally just short of tying the score.

The victory put the Giants just half a game back of the league-leading Cardinals.

Gabby Gabler won a suit of clothes from the Giants for turning in his eighth pitching victory, but he wasn't on hand at the finish to receive it, for the Bees blasted him off the mound with their closing splurge, and Dick Coffman wound up the assignment.

Guy Bush went the full distance for the Bees and allowed but nine hits, although four of them came in the first, when the Giants scored two of their runs, and two others came in the ninth, when the last New York tally was sent across.

The Bees sent both of their runs across in the ninth, and had the bases loaded when Dick Bartell threw out Al Lopez to end the game. Three straight singles, by Rabbit Warstler, Gene Moore and Baxter Jordan brought in the first run, and Wally Berger's long liner to leftfield sent the other across.

Four straight singles, by Moore, Burgess Whitehead, Mel Ott and Jim Ripple produced the Giants' two runs in the first inning, and in the ninth Ott singled, Ripple sacrificed and Travis Jackson hit safely to bring the other in.

In addition to being their tenth straight win, the victory was the Giants' thirtieth in their last 35 starts, and kept them right on the heels of the league-leading Cardinals.

W. & L. Tackle Refused Job or a Scholarship

Richmond, Va., Aug. 21 (AP).—R. A. Smith, graduate manager of athletics at Washington and Lee, said today Howard (Tubby) Owings, 260-pound tackle from Norfolk, had been refused a job or scholarship and probably would not return to the university this fall. Smith said the committee made its decision in considering applications under the Graham plan.

"Owings is a smart young man," Smith said, "but he just didn't pay much attention to his class work and his marks weren't up to standard. So the committee said it could not see how he could be aided.

Big Welcome Planned for U. S. Stars

Olympic Team to Get 'Walker Celebration' on September 3.

Owens Will Be Honored on Arrival at N. Y.; Medals Voted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 21.—America's Olympic heroes will swing up lower Broadway's granite canyon September 3 for an old-time "Walker celebration."

They will ride from the Battery to Harlem, up ticker-tape row, and thence to the Municipal Stadium on Randalls Island, where they will be presented with medals donated by the city.

These plans were announced today by Stanley H. Howe, executive secretary to Mayor Fiorello La Guardia.

First of the famous athletes to arrive will be Jesse Owens, winner of four gold medals in the recent games. He will be aboard the Queen Mary Monday and will be greeted by his wife, mother and father and members of the New York and Cleveland Olympic committees. He will go to Cleveland in a special car Monday night for a celebration in Cleveland Tuesday, and return to New York for the celebration September 3.

The other members of the American team will get in on two boats, the President Roosevelt, scheduled to arrive August 28, and the Manhattan, due September 3.

Secretary Howe announced that the mayor's committees had arranged for members of the team who arrive on the President Roosevelt to be housed, fed and entertained by the city's hotels, restaurants and theaters.

Then finally, on September 3, when the Manhattan arrives, she will be met at the Narrows by the committee and by other members of the Olympic team, and the athletes will be landed at the Battery, greeted by Mayor LaGuardia on the City Hall steps and wheeled up Broadway to Central Park and then into Harlem. The presentation of the medals in the Randalls Island Stadium will be open to the public and will be supervised by Jack Dempsey and Bill Robinson, Negro tap dancer, who are co-chairmen of the mayor's committee in charge of the presentation.

Robinson talked over the shore-to-ship telephone to Owens on the Queen Mary today. The dancer said that Owens agreed to the plan. Some indication that Owens might tie up with Robinson if and when he turns professional was given when the dancer said to Owens:

"I know you've got a lot of offers, but remember what I said. Don't do anything until I see you?"

Francis W. Poulson, Ohio Democratic State chairman, in New York to confer with Chairman James A. Farley, said that Ohio's Governor, Martin L. Davey, has appointed a committee to raise funds to purchase a home for Owens.

"Gov. Davey feels that fame is fleeting," Poulson said, "and that the State of Ohio should give something substantial to its greatest athlete."

P. W. A. Reaches Post Association Series, Defeating G. P. O., 6-4

Farrell's Bat Big Factor Of Game

Victory Gives Winners Both Half Flags in Departmental.

Public Works Administration's hard-hitting baseball team administered a 6-4 defeat to G. P. O. in their Departmental League game yesterday, winning the second-half race and thereby dispensing with the necessity of a play-off for the league championship. No series will be played inasmuch as the first-half championship also went to PWA.

The potent left arm of Bob Lyons, which has been aged to ripe mellowness in a baseball uniform, simply was not equal to the task of hurling eight innings for Heurichs on Wednesday and six more for the Printers yesterday. Lyons went the full six innings, but PWA picked up 13 hits and made the most of them. G. P. O., on the other hand, was held to six hits by Mattack, one a home run by Benny Schneider in the fifth inning, which accounted for three of his team's four runs.

Farrell Pounds Ball.

Jake Farrell's big bat played an important role in the victory, driving out two hits that brought in three runs. Koenig, Hudson, Jewett and Coe also contributed generously to Lyons' embarrassment with their prolific bat-swinging. Max Coe, at shortstop, was the defensive hero of the fray, handling a half-dozen chances faultlessly, two of which were labeled hits.

PWA will play several independent games while awaiting the start of The Post Association city series, which will culminate the local sandlot season.

Olympic Runners Win More Meets

Stockholm, Aug. 21 (AP).—America's barnstorming Olympic track and field stars won five more events today.

Forrest (Spec) Towns, the Georgia timber topper, captured the 200-meter hurdles in 24.5 seconds, and Glenn Cunningham made a brilliant finish to win the 1,500-meters run. Other American victories were turned in by Ken Carpenter, of Compton, Calif.; Foy Draper, of Whittier, Calif., and Dave Albritton, Ohio State's great high jumper.

Helsingfors, Finland, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—American Olympic athletes, competing in two Finnish track meets today, won every event in which they were entered.

Ralph Metcalfe won the 100 and 200 meter dashes at Olavinlinna in 10.7 seconds and 22.2 seconds, respectively. At Tainionkoski Archie Williams triumphed in the 100 meters in 11.2 and the 400 meters in 50.6. Archie San Romani took the 1,500 meters in 3:59.2. Gordon (Slinger) Dunn captured the shot put and the discus throw, and Bill Graber took the pole vault.

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 21 (U.P.).—An American 1,000-meter relay team, composed of Cornelius Johnson, Al Fitch, Mack Robinson and Johnny Woodruff, set a world record of 1 minute 53.1 seconds in winning that event tonight at the Myre track and field meet.

Robert to Tangle With Managoff

Yvon Robert, the 22-year-old French-Canadian, who generally is credited with chasing Danno O'Mahoney back to the Auld Sod, will return to Washington next Thursday night against Ivan Managoff, the local reigning wrestling sensation.

Yvon the proud possessor of a diamond-studded belt, emblematic of the title he won from O'Mahoney, and more color than any figure in the mat game since the heyday of Jimmy Londos.

Managoff qualified for the shot at Robert by his spectacular defeat of Gino Garibaldi last Thursday night, which climaxed a long winning streak in Washington rings.

2 Californians Enter Essex Net Final

Helen Jacob, Alice Marble to Fight It Out Both in Singles and Doubles.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 21.—The march of California's women's tennis brigade continued today as Miss Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, and Miss Alice Marble, San Francisco, tossed aside Bay State foes to provide an all-Pacific Coast final tomorrow in the Essex County Club's invitation tournament.

The chopstroking Wimbledon and national champion turned back unseeded Kay Winthrop, of nearby Ipswich, 8—6, 6—3, after being within a point of losing the first set, while Miss Marble scored the most notable victory of her comeback drive by eliminating Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, third ranking player nationally, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5.

The two victors had equal success in doubles and will be on opposite sides of the net in that final tomorrow, also. Miss Marble, paired with Kay Stammers, of England, beat Miss Winthrop and Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, of Brookline, 6—4, 6—4, while Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Fabyan, national doubles champions, downed Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Mme. Sylvia Henrottin, of France, 6—3, 6—3.

What, at first glance, appears to be an ordinary Sunday schedule for the Northern Virginia League at a second, and more inquisitive, looms as potent as a fat keg of dynamite on a hot stove. It will take a few upsets to make any drastic changes in the league standings, but the old axiom that anything can happen in baseball holds good in this league too.

In the Red Section all contestants will play double-headers. Vienna, which boasts a one-game lead over the second-place Herndon outfit, tangles with Occoquan. Herndon meets Falls Church. Occoquan and Falls Church are next to last and last, respectively, in the social ratings, but on past performances not to be snubbed in any company. If Occoquan takes even one game from the leaders it is possible for Herndon to assume undisputed possession of first place.

In the White Section neither Leesburg nor Middleburg, co-occupants of first place, should have any trouble with their respective opponents, Ashburn and Warrenton, who are the two lowest clubs in the circuit. But here again an upset may prove fatal to the championship aspirations of either front-runner and neither can afford to take their games lightly.

District Playground All-Stars Defeat Alexandria Trackmen

The all-star team representing the Washington Playgrounds scored an easy triumph over a similar combination from Alexandria, Va., yesterday at Western Stadium. Except in a few events, the Washington runners showed great superiority over their Virginia competitors.

Alvin Spearman, of Alexandria, was the best performer for the losing squad. He was first in the 115-pound 80-yard dash and baseball throw for distance, third in the running broad jump, and a member of team. Charles "Buddy" Davis, of Washington, scored first places in the unrestricted 100-yard dash and running broad jump. Sutemi the second-place Alexandria relay Murayma, a Japanese boy, representing Stoddart, again won an easy victory in the 100-pound class 60-yard dash.

Moore Enters Semifinals

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 21.—Flashing his old form of a few years back, when he captured the Belle Haven Country Club golf team, Dr. S. B. Moore eliminated Charles Moore from Gazette Trophy play at that club today, winning their quarter-round match 2-up on the eighteenth. By virtue of his victory, he gained the right to oppose "Jess" Willard in the semifinals.

The winner of the Moore-Willard match, which will probably be held this week-end, will meet Tom Hulfish, lower-flight finalist, for the trophy.

Whitney Horse Crowned at Berryville

Spring Hope Takes Show Championship; Randle Star Wins Jump.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., Aug. 21.—Mrs. John Hay Whitney, mistress of Llangollen Stables at Upperville, further augmented her victories of yesterday by winning the championship of the final day's showing of the Berryville Horse Show.

It was just a case of deciding which of three eligible representatives had the championship caliber, for tied with Spring Hope, the winner, were Bon Diable and Nickel, each with ten points to their credit. Nickel was adjudged the reserve champion.

A crowd of 5,000 people saw Bon Diable win for the third and final time the silver cups offered in the Corinthian class. In previous years, two of Mrs. Whitney's thoroughbreds had accounted for this trophy. Bon Diable also took care of the middle and heavyweight event, while Nickel added his third victory today by annexing the green hunter class.

D. C. Owned Horse Wins.

U. S. Randle, a Washingtonian, captured the touch and out jump with Governor, while Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, of this place, saved the local lights from being whitewashed by taking the Clarke County hunters with Merry Prince. Mrs. Whitney's pony, Dolly, made a clean sweep in the pony events, while Llangollen and Peach Bros., of Upperville, figured prominently in the heavy draft classes.

The only accident of the day was the cropper of Norman Haymaker, astride Clifton's Gem, which stumbled in the Clarke County hunter class. A small bone in his elbow was broken in the fall.

and lost 5 in 1934 and won 25 and lost 14 last year. He had won 15 and lost 13 up until today's game, which was credited as a loss for him.

Born in Greensboro, N. C., Ferrell was 28 years old last February 2. The Indians picked up Ferrell from a semipro team at East Douglas, Mass., in 1927, and farmed him out to the Terre Haute Club, of the Three-I League in 1928. After one year in the minors he joined Cleveland and became a consistent winner until 1933. His lifetime major-league record is 156 victories and 95 losses.

Yankees Win, 4-1, From Bosox

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 21.—The league-leading Yankees opened their home stand successfully today, downing the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 1, behind Monte Pearson's four-hit pitching.

The victory, Pearson's sixteenth of the season, was clinched when the Yankees shoved three runs across in the sixth off Wes Ferrell.

Ferrell walked from the mound during the scoring splurge without getting orders from Manager Joe Cronin, and was fined $1,000 and suspended indefinitely by the Sox pilot for doing so.

The only Boston run, and the first hit off Pearson, came in the fifth when Rick Ferrell clouted his eighth homer of the year.

The Yanks opened their scoring in the fifth when Jake Powell singled, advanced on Pearson's infield grounder, and came home on Frank Crosetti's two-bagger. A walk to Lou Gehrig started off the winning spree in the sixth. Bill Dickey singled, Powell beat out a hit, bringing in one run, Tony Lazzeri walked and Pearson hit a two-run single.

Ferrell was charged with the defeat. He was succeeded on the mound by Jack Russell, who gave way later to Rube Walberg.

The victory maintained the Yanks' wide edge over the rest of the American League pack.

Brewers vs. Woodmen For Second-Half Flag

The Heurich Brewers, who haven't been able to win a championship after six games of a five-game series, are going out on the West Ellipse tomorrow afternoon in an effort to clinch the second-half title of the Post Association's Capital City League in a single game.

It is true that should the Brewers defeat Woodmen of the World when they meet at 3:15 tomorrow it will give them possession of second-half honors. But when it is considered that the same Brewers spent six days in attempt to oust Miller Furniture Co. from taking their Industrial League crown, victory tomorrow looks far from probable.

Perkins Leads; Mackenzie in 4th Place

Capital Golfer Trails by 4 Strokes at Wheeling; Has 73—67 Card.

By the Associated Press.

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 21.—Phil Perkins, of Cleveland, one-time British amateur golf champion, paced the field through the first 36 holes of the Wheeling Centennial golf tournament today.

He posted an aggregate score of 136, 3 ahead of the field.

Billie Burke, of Cleveland, winner of the National Open in 1931, and Ralph Guldahl, of Texas, tied for second with 139.

Roland Mackenzie, of the Congresional Club, Washington, D. C., placed fourth, with 140, 1 stroke better than Frank Moore, of Cleveland; Johnny Conner, of Pittsburgh, and Ted Luther, Girard, Ohio, tied at 141.

Perkins shot two rounds of sub-par golf, cutting three from the conventional 70 in the morning and carding a 69 in the afternoon. He scored five birdies on the first round and two on the second.

Mackenzie Adds 67 Round.

A 6 on the par-3 fourteenth helped boost Burke's first round total to 72, but he cut 3 from par in the afternoon. Guldahl had a 69 and 70.

Mackenzie had a 73 on his morning round, but carded a sub-par 67 in the afternoon.

Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh, former National Open champion trailed far down the list with 145.

Case Ace, Hurt, Out Of $40,000 Race

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Case Ace, 2-year-old star from Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Chicago-owned Milky Way Farm, today was declared out of the $40,000 Hopeful, to be run at Saratoga August 29, and possibly for the remainder of the season.

The son of Teddy, leading money-winning juvenile and undefeated until he came East, injured himself at the gate Wednesday at Saratoga when he met his first defeat in the race won by E. R. Bradley's Billionaire. He had won three straight races in the West, including the Arlington Futurity, and was an outstanding contender for the 2-year-old championship.

Bob McGarvey, trainer for Mrs. Mars, said the colt had a bad knee and when he further injured himself this week he gave up hope of getting him ready for the Spa's richest stake.

Ladfield Wins Narragansett Park Feature Race

Upside Down Second in Sprint

Daily Double Combine of Zevanaid, Cold Spill Pays $279.30.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 21.—Mrs. C. Crane's Ladfield made it two in a row when he ran the 6 furlongs of the Aquineck Claiming Stakes in 1:11 2-5 to defeat A. C. Bostwick's Upside Down by a length. T. F. Sword's Vote Boy was third, two lengths back of Upside Down.

On Tuesday Ladfield was timed in 1:11 3-5 in winning from a similar field. He followed a similar course today with Tommy Luther again astride the big and aging son Ladkin. Luther kept him back of the pace set by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Snow's Happy Knot, who had A. C. Bostwick's Upside Down trailing her. Vote Boy ran third to these two.

Ladfield started to move gradually through the far turn but Jockey Luther really asked the horse for some speed after rounding into the home stretch and the thoroughbred knew the answer. He sailed by the others to win $1,605 for his owner. Favored by the bettors, Ladfield paid $7.50, $3.20 and $2.80. Upside Down paid $5.10 and $3.40 and Vote Boy $5.20.

The daily double today paid $279.30. There were 74 tickets sold on the combination of Miss A. Doris' Zevanaid, winner of the first race, and T. P. Morgan's Cold Spill, winner of the second.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZEVANAID, $10.70, $6.50, $4.10; EDDIE HELCK, $25.90, $15.70; SIR KAI, $5.70.

ZEVANAID took command at once, withstood determined early opposition from EDDIE HELCK, shook him off, drew clear and, hard ridden, lasted. EDDIE HELCK made a bold attempt to go along with the leader and, in closest chase throughout, held on stubbornly, but barely lasted to save the place from SIR KAI. The latter, badly outpaced until leaving the backstretch, came through on the inside and, closing with a rush, was overtaking the leaders rapidly at the close. PRINCE DANNY went well placed all the way, though losing ground at the stretch turn. MY BLONDE was working her way up steadily until reaching the stretch, where Hightshoe took her extremely wide. MIDNIGHT FLYER weakened.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLD SPILL, $19.10, $9.80, $8.30; BELOW COST, $5.70, $3.90; BULL MARKET, $5.60.

COLD SPILL, under punishment in an effort to keep up in the run to the first turn, dropped back in the run down the backstretch, swung to the outside stretch and, closing stoutly under hard urging, was up the last stride. BELOW COST worked his way up steadily and fought it out courageously through the stretch. BULL MARKET, outpaced early, came stoutly, gained a brief lead in the stretch, but was unable to maintain his advantage under punishment. CLAIMANT, well up all the way, weakened under punishment in the stretch run. CHILLA MAY had speed, though faltering after going a half-mile.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:27. Winner, Oak Tree Stables' br. f. (2), by Bewithus—Oppo. Trained by William Hartman. Value to winner, $750; second, $110; third, $110; fourth, $30. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:45 1-5, 1:06 3-5.

LADY BEWITHUS had speed from start, drew away into a long lead after shaking off MALIGN and drew out and was being eased up through the last sixteenth. BEAU EDWINA, well placed all the way, lacked speed to cope with the winner and just lasted to get a dead heat with SAVAGE BEAUTY. The latter closed stoutly on the outside after being unable to keep up early. MARY ELISE, unable to keep up early, closed willingly through the stretch run. ESCO HIGH faltered after showing a flash of early speed. MALIGN displayed good speed, but, hard ridden, faltered in last three-sixteenths. WOOF suffered sharp interference in the opening sixteenth, was straightened out again, only to be badly bumped and retired steadily.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; the Waltham. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:02½. Winner, Miss A. Doris' ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY HIGLOSS, $4.50, $3.00, $2.70; BLACK MISTRESS, $4.80, $3.60; PELERINE, $5.60.

LADY HIGLOSS was prominent from the outset, supplanted GOOD OMEN in the command and, hard ridden, held BLACK MISTRESS safe. The latter lacked her usual early speed, made her effort in the last five-sixteenths and closed with a rush through the stretch. PELERINE, away slowly, closed an immense gap. GOOD OMEN, a rapid beginner, showed keen speed, though unable to keep pace in the final strides. DANCING DOLL, well placed, was unable to improve her position.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500 added; the Aquidneck Claiming Stake. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:39½. Winner, Mrs. C Crane's b. h. (7), by Ladkin—Minefield. Trained by W. G. Wilson. Net value to winner, $1,605; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $75. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADFIELD, $7.50, $3.70, $2.80; UPSIDE DOWN, $5.10, $3.40; VOTE BOY, $5.20.

LADFIELD was steadied along in back of the pace, responded gamely when called upon in the stretch, wore down UPSIDE DOWN and drew clear at the end. UPSIDE DOWN had speed from the outset, took command when HAPPY KNOT began tiring, though unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. VOTE BOY, under reserve while chasing the pace, came willingly in the stretch. HAPPY BOLIVAR, unable to keep up early, held on well in the stretch drive. HAPPY KNOT displayed keen speed in pace making, faltering in the closing quarter.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:11½. Winner, Mrs. E. I. Wade's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UP AND UP, $3.20, $2.60, $2.40; MAMAS CHOICE, $4.60, $3.40; CANTINE LASS, $3.00.

UP AND UP, in closest chase of the pace established by Mamas Choice, wore the latter down in the stretch and, hard ridden, held him safe to the end. MAMAS CHOICE drew close, straightened out on the backstretch, was steadied along under slight restraint and fought it out gamely, though unable to cope with the winner in the closing drive. CANTINE LASS was rated along within striking distance of the leaders, but, though closing stoutly, was not good enough.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:46½. Winner, Miss Mary White's br. g. (8), by King James—Wrackpast. Trained by F. J. MacDonald. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CROWNED HEAD, $9.00, $5.70, $4.80; REAL JAM, $33.60, $16.80; WOULD DARE, $6.60.

CROWNED HEAD was kept within striking distance of the pace and raced under reserve until nearing the far turn, moved up stoutly when called upon to take the lead before reaching the stretch and drew out steadily in the last three-sixteenths. REAL JAM went to the front in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in front and, though unable to keep pace with the winner, held on willigly to the close. WOULD DARE, outpaced early, close with a belated bid through the last furlong. LIGHT HEELED, unable to keep up in the first six furlongs, saved ground at the stretch turn and closed willingly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:16. Off at 6:17. Winner, Nat Levy's ch. f. AMERICAN BELLE was rated along back of the pace being established by JUST REMEMBER, wore the latter down when called upon and drew out through the stretch. Time Out!

"A wise guy, huh—throwing magnets!"

with Bill Bennings.

Narragansett Park, Aug. 21.

Dear Al: Frankie Rice, of Frederick, Md., calls our attention to the fact that in Australia they are experimenting with rubber shoes for race horses. He says that the writers now have some excuse for saying that so-and-so bounced home by five lengths. Looks as if Rice will be mine forever for he closes his note with "Yours 'till Clocker Mike makes a million." Lady Bewithus was with us today to the tune of a $12.90 mutuel. But there were a lot of them against us, including My Blonde, the rascal. How's Clocker Mike doing at Cumberland. Or is he doing? Speaking of Cumberland, don't be surprised if there is a mile track there within the next three years. The present course is 8 feet wider than Pimlico. All the better for the horses running out at the turns. I'm told that the Maryland tracks are having quite a squabble over what kind of a finish camera will be used and that a different set-up may be used at each of the fall meetings. There are only two cameras to my way of thinking. One is here and the other is at Santa Anita. I spoke of dead heats yesterday and there were two here today. And we are almost dead with the heat. I wish the Bennings horses would get hot. BILL.

First race—Lee Hasting, one of the few recent Bennings winners, seems headed for another purse in the day's opener. Needs only to run his race. Merry Maker is the one to beat. Durwrack is better than rated and has a fighting chance.

Second race—Jubilee Jim is a consistent and honest fellow with plenty of speed. I'm going to try to make him beat Double Finesse, in light, and Character.

Third race—Great Haste is lightly weighted, thanks to the apprentice allowance. The riding will be done by Griggs, a hot boy. I see no reason for mistakes. Chatuga and Deduce to fight it out for the place prize.

Fourth race—Candy Prince, breaking off the rail and with only 103 pounds up, should make every post a winning one if Apprentice Hightshoe gets him off. Bright and Early has worked well and is dangerous. Red Wagon is always a threat.

Fifth race—Lynx Eye probably likes a little more distance than this mile but is far too fit to be placed anywhere except on top. Dark Hope carries top weight but is ready for the best. Preeminent is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—El Puma earns his way in this company and appears headed for another set of brackets. Synod is fast and likes the route. Plucky Baby to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Chryleis has been doing little of late but is being groomed for a killing. I'm going to try to guess tomorrow as the day of days. Singer's Folly and Hadtobe are likely to be in the pay.

Eighth race—Still Alarm will have Longden to do the riding and should win with the light assignment. Marpal and Flying Dere will be ready if the top fellow makes mistakes.

Best bet—Lynx Eye.

Cumberland Selections.
By Clocker Mike.

Trainer C. P. Miles, jr., who is battling J. Bowes Bond for the gold watch to be awarded the winning trainer, has the Algonquin Hotel Purse locked up. He has named Dona Dulcin and Sophisticate for 1 1-16-mile affair, and either can win.

First race—Anjoe needed last. Will have Loch London and High Music to head off for first money.

Second race—Charlie Beal tells me Veritas can't miss tomorrow. Lady Windsor appears capable of whipping Canteret for the place money.

Third race—Justa Gal tired as if short earlier in the week. Quick Vine broke badly last out. Happy Host's form up North was good, but I rate them as named.

Fourth race—Work watchers say J. Bowes Bond will win this with Out of Fire. Master Lad and Impromptu should split up remainder of purse.

Fifth race—If the Hayman-Johnson entry is beaten tomorrow then look for Hard Chase to turn the trick. Energetic Lady shapes up as named.

Sixth race—Flying Carpet is spread here, if able to get postward. Peggy Can may outlast Topsy H. for the place award.

Seventh race—Golden Play's last should be forgotten. Porphry and Bay Wrack rate as named.

Best bet—Hayman-Johnson entry, fifth race.

Tambou Takes Cumberland Feature

Coffman Rides 2 Winners; Double Pays $66; 9,000 Watch Program.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 21.—Mrs. H. E. Taylor's Tambov proved himself probably the best sprinter on the grounds, when he picked up 117 pounds and after being blocked three times, raced six and one-half furlongs in 1:22 3-5 to win the Col. William H. Robertson Purse, the day's headliner, and his second feature of the meeting.

The crowd of 9,000 had heart trouble as Tambov, favorite, was bothered three times the opening half-mile. Skeets Holland kept the gelding at his task and from the head of the lane home he closed like a runaway horse to win by two lengths from J. E. Keyser's Wise Money, early pacemaker. Back in third place came R. A. Campbell's Jack Low with the other five starters well strung out.

Cecil Coffman, local boy broke the tie with Sammy Palumbo for the jockey leadership by winning the day's first two races. Coffman opened the program by scoring with W. E. Johnson's Justa Giro, and then came back with Mrs. R. M. Boorse's By Surprise. This combination paid $66.60 in the daily double. Coffman now has eight winners at the meeting.

The day was extremely warm, but the wagering went well ahead of that for a similar day last year.

The attendance and pari-mutuel handle, according to President Harry A. Manley is about 20 per cent greater than a year ago.

M. R. Waugh dropped $850 into the claiming box and led away Tambov.

For failing to keep Dressmaker straight while running the fourth race, Jockey J. Hernandez was fined $25 by the stewards.

WPA Fires Victim In Tampa Flogging

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 21 (AP).—Frank P. Ingram, WPA district director, said today Eugene F. Poulnot, central figure in the kidnaping trial of five former Tampa policemen at Bartow, has been dismissed as a WPA worker because of "political activities."

The Socialist Party of Florida recently named Poulnot as its candidate for Representative in Congress from the Fifth District. Poulnot had been a WPA worker for some time.

Five former Tampa policemen were convicted at Bartow for the kidnaping of Poulnot last November 30, when Joseph Shoemaker was flogged fatally.

Canadian Grain Vessel Wrecks Gates at Lock

Cornwall, Ontario, Aug. 21 (AP).—Snapping snubbing-cables as she was entering Lock 18 in Cornwall Canal today, the Canada Steamship Lines grain carrier Hastings crashed into the east gates and tore them from the lock wall.

Canal authorities reported damage to lock gates would result in a complete tie-up of navigation for more than 48 hours. Repairs were under way tonight.

The Hastings was not damaged.

By Bob Zuppke
Famous Football Coach.

WELL, I'M GOING TO DO MY BEST EVERY TIME I PUT ON A SUIT
YOU DON'T LOOK LIKE A BOY WHO WOULD EXPECT TO MAKE THE TEAM JUST BECAUSE HIS COUSIN WAS COACH
IF I HAD TO MAKE THE TEAM THAT WAY, I WOULDN'T PLAY
THE KID WAS ALL-STATE HIGH SCHOOL HALFBACK LAST YEAR!
YOUNG NED BRANT, EH? EVERY EYE IN THE BIG EIGHT CONFERENCE WILL BE ON HIM!
